ABOUT PEOPLE

The Happy Breed Of Garbage Men

jack scott

You meet such interesting people in the newspaper business — Old Cliche.

★ ★ ★

If I learned anything at all in several years of prowling the globe in search of news — and sometimes I wonder — it is that the happiest workers of the world are garbage collectors.

From the boisterous dustmen of Britain to the ribald basuradors of Buenos Aires they are, without exception, a marvellously, mysteriously happy-go-lucky breed.

Well, there I was, sharing my wee lunch-time sandwich with the gulls at Clover Point, when the City of Victoria garbage truck No. 324 pulled up ahead. Five of the crew strolled, laughing and with great good humor, to have their sandwiches on the beach and the driver himself stepped down from the cab, bearing a No. Nine iron, and proceeded to loft some sweet-looking approach shots on the grassy oval there. I mean, it could only happen in dear old Victoria.

So that's how I came to meet Doug Hudlin, Victoria-born, aged 48, an 18-handicapper at Cedar Hill though, frankly, I'd refuse to play him on those terms, descendant of Missouri slaves, and one of the handsomest men in our town. To several thousand Victorian youngsters he's best known as a baseball umpire — been 20 years president of the Victoria Umpires' Association and a long-time consultant for the Little League — and a man who will, on occasion, summarily evict an obstreperous, overly-partisan parent from the stands.

Doug's great-grandfather fled from slavery in Missouri to farm in Saanich, but the Hudlin side of the family settled in Victoria purely by chance. It was here, at Willows race track, that Doug's father, an itinerant jockey on the North American circuit, faced up to a weight problem, liked the town, settled down. One reason, Doug now thinks, is that Victoria, then and now, has been refreshingly free of overt discrimination.

How to explain the international figure of The Jolly Garbageman? Doug thinks there are many answers.

"There must be a whole library shelf of books with garbagemen jokes of the past," he reflected, "but today the work isn't considered comical or beneath a man's dignity. Just the opposite, in fact. You're doing an absolutely essential service, one of the few jobs that cause people to be glad to see you when you pull up at their door. Some of that feeling rubs off on a man, I guess. You're not selling or buying. You're just doing something that has to be done.

"The work isn't nearly as tough as it was when I went into it 18 years ago. The new kinds of collecting equipment have helped, but mainly it's because the conversion to oil means that there aren't the heavy cans of ashes that used to be murder on a man's back. Still, we work mighty hard, cover about 450 houses a day, and, like baseball, it's entirely a team effort. Maybe that helps to explain the good spirits. Men who work as a team, relying on the next man to carry his share, always seem to get along well.

"Our particular six-man crew on 324 has been together now for something like seven years. Besides myself there's Willie, John, Art, Nick and Kaar. We're a sort of little United Nations with our backgrounds in the southern States, England, Poland, Germany, Norway and the Ukraine. You couldn't want a more relaxed, friendly group of men.

"Oh, sure, there are some things that bug you. Robert Frost said you could tell a man by the fences he makes and we can tell a woman by the garbage she leaves. Ah, but you take the good with the bad, eh? That's life."

Ever the non-conformist, I dropped in to the Elite barber shop on Fort Street for a trim and darned if the man behind the chair wasn't my old friend Ted Ashlee, a long, lean bloke who used to cut my hair when it was all there and before the eternal snow had fallen. Long before your time, Shnooky.

The barber business these days isn't terrible, as I would have guessed. It's disastrous. Ted hasn't seen a client under the age of 35 for so long that he's come to think of himself as a specialist in tonsorial geriatrics.

Why, then, did he look so remarkably content and at peace with the world? The answer is that, at the age of 57, Ted is on the brink of a whole new career that has nothing whatever to do with hair.

It began six years ago when he moved from Duncan to Vancouver, found the big town a hateful, boring place and enrolled in a course of creative writing "just for something to do." The best advice he got in the course — the best advice any would-be writer ever gets — was to write about what he knew. In Ted's case that went back to an early career as a merchant seaman and deep-sea fisherman.

Against all the incredible odds, his first short story was accepted by Canadian Boy, the Scouts' magazine. That, in turn, led to several more that attracted the interest of Holt, Rinehart and Winston, the publishers, who commissioned him to write the texts for some illustrated children's books.

In his spare time, over 14 months, Ted put together his first novel for young readers. It's called "Voyage Into Danger," a cracking good adventure story set in the Queen Charlottes, published in Canada and Britain and now at your favorite book shop. He now has another in the works. If the royalties are as green as they promise to be, Ted won't mind if you wear your hair down to your knees. Shnooky.

We met Eric and Jean Michelsen because, you see, we have this VIP editor friend who sneaks off occasionally to the golf course.

His system is diabolically clever. Spreads his most important papers on his desk, places his reading glasses and pen on top of them and leaves his desk lamp burning. The net effect is that of a man who has just stepped around the corner for a moment, perhaps to an important executive conference or the men's room. It hasn't fooled anyone, of course, but eases his conscience.

Naturally, he favors the more obscure golf courses where he's unlikely to run into his seniors — whose desk lamps are also burning — and this is how we came to play Broome Hill, the nine-hole course at Sooke and truly a delight.

Eric, who is 51, was a logger until, a dozen years ago in a summer of strikes and fires in the forest, he began to wonder if there wasn't a more reliable vocation. An informal survey of Sooke indicated that there were exactly seven golfers in the vicinity. Undaunted, as the saying goes, he and Jean bought the old 96-acre Comeau farm, spent a year-and-a-half converting its hilly pastures into nine challenging and scenic holes and began the construction of a club house. It was an act of faith that's paid off handsomely.

Like Gregarah, on Prospect Lake, another of my favorites, Broome Hill seems to have been laid out by an architect who hated the human race, but the pain of double-bogeys is eased by gorgeous views of the Olympics and the Sooke range. It plays to a par 64 and the course record, shared by several, is 59.

There are now more than 200 members, apart from the considerable numbers of Victorians who make regular pilgrimages, and the green fees are just $2 on week days, $3 on weekends. Which is nice, too.

Farmers For A Day

Melanie Douglas (left) of San Diego and Marianne Girard of Montreal are introduced to Cool-Aid's three-acre farm in Saanich. Cool-Aid hires young travellers on a daily basis to help run the farm. About 190 young people have worked on the farm so far for $8 a day. In centre is farm organizer Rick Stamford. (Bill Halkett Photo)

Blood Pours In

Eighteen donors gave blood in the first half-hour of today's clinic at the University of Victoria, indicating a three-day drive by the Red Cross to build critically low supplies will finish as strong as it started.

Donors totalled 247 Tuesday, down from 276 Monday but well over the minimum objective the local Red Cross traditionally sets of 150 a day.

Doctors at Royal Jubilee and St. Joseph's Hospitals said last week that blood was in such short supply some surgery was in danger of being cancelled. The hospitals recently received only half their requested allotments from the Red Cross central supply in Vancouver.

An international difference in donor practices prevented Tuesday's total passing the total of donors on Monday.

Two busloads, about 80 Japanese sailors from the defence ships Katori and Yamagumo in port, turned up at Red Cross House in the afternoon to give blood. They had to depart without doing so.

The reason, detailed in part through an interpreter:

The Japanese sailors give blood regularly, apparently once a month, but only 200 ccs a time.

Canadian donors give about 480 ccs and the amount of preservative in the plastic containers for donations is based on that size. The containers are antiseptically sealed and there was no way to adjust the amount of preservative.

Charles MacNeill, supervisor of the local Red Cross blood panel, said today he and his staff were "most appreciative" of the Japanese effort and "we were all very disappointed; it was just unfortunate circumstances."

13 PER CENT FIGURE MISLEADING

Doctors Richer? Well, Maybe

By BRUCE YEMEN

In spite of an almost 13 per cent increase in gross medicare payments to B.C. doctors, there is no solid proof that most doctors made substantially more money last year than in the previous year.

Published for the third time since B.C. joined national medicare in 1968, figures showing medicare payments to doctors fail to give more than a general guide to their financial fortunes.

●

The figures are published by the Medical Services Commission which administers the over-all medical care plan in B.C. The parliamentary library and the public library will have a copy of the list of payments.

While payments to doctors for services under the medicare plan increased by almost 13 per cent to $128 million, there may have been as many as five per cent more doctors receiving payments.

In addition, the doctors received a fee increase of about 3.5 per cent at the end of 1969, which means the fiscal year comparisons for 1970-71 and 1969-70 are not on the same fee base.

For nine months of the 1969-70 fiscal year, doctors were working for a lower fee, which means it isn't fair to suggest they made 13 or even eight per cent more money this past year by churning more patients through their offices.

A further complication is that doctors' expenses increased as a result of salary increases granted to nurses. The rising cost of equipment and other supplies also ate into increased income.

But a glance through the list of payments shows that wide disparities continue to exist in the payments earned within different branches of medical practice.

A Victoria family doctor, for instance, shows payments of about $55,000 for each of the two years. Another holds steady around $35,000. But another who pulled in $19,000 two years ago is now up to $35,000. But it turns out he is a young doctor who is building up a practice.

A Victoria eye specialist who received $95,000 in payments in 1969-70 is down to $83,000 in the latest list, possibly because of provincial government cutbacks in allowable eye examinations from once a year to once every two years.

But another eye specialist, equally well established in practice, held steady at $65,000 for each of the years.

A radiologist with $130,000 in payments in 1969-70 received $167,000 in the latest year.

Publication of the figures was made mandatory by the provincial cabinet about two years ago. The move brought the medicare plan into line with other public agencies which also must publish lists of payments of more than $500 to individuals and companies.

Spokesmen for the Medical Services Commission have said in the past that they have adequate control over individual doctors abusing the plan, because they keep a "statistical profile" on each doctor.

●

The fact that the medicare list is the only one of its kind — except the provincial government's own Public Accounts — which is voluntarily given to the press has strengthened the belief that the government is using publicity to hold down doctors' wage demands as a group rather than to expose individial abuses.

The government has made no move to provide the kind of supporting information necessary to evaluate individual doctor's payments, such as how hard each doctor works.

The government's success in convincing doctors to defer any increases in their fees for this year appears to have helped provide a whopping 40 per cent increase in federal contributions to the medicare plan in the past year — $51 million instead of $36 million.

No Change to Public—Mayors

Two Greater Victoria mayors said today there will be no basic change in service to the public under the proposed amalgamated social services agency under the Capital Regional District.

Esquimalt Mayor Art Young said no one questions the work of Family and Children's Service.

The F and CS had agreed it should be a regional function, but not under the CRD but another elected board, he said. (See also Page 40)

In the future, many other things — library, fire, police — could be regionalized.

"If we follow your thinking we must elect a new board for each function," he said.

★ ★ ★

He made the comments during a meeting this morning of the regional district's social services committee and F and CS officials.

Oak Bay Mayor Frances Elford said regional board directors, although they deal with sewers and parks, are concerned with human beings "otherwise they would not run for public office. As I understand it, none of the good works by F and CS would be thrown away. None of the ability to initiate new programs need be lost. There's no necessity for anyone in F and CS to feel loss of seniority and position."

John Gordon, an F and CS director, said, "We have accepted the principle of regionalization. I was not aware until this morning that the plan outlines is flexible."

Mayor Back At the End Of Summer?

Mayor Courtney Haddock will be out of hospital in two weeks and able to resume "some" city hall duties by the end of the summer, his doctor said Tuesday.

Dr. Lumir L. Ptak said the mayor's condition continues to improve. He now is listed in satisfactory condition and resting comfortably in the intensive care unit at Royal Jubilee Hospital.

The doctor also cleared up confusion about the nature of Haddock's illness, variously reported by sources — including the mayor himself — as angina and heart attack.

Haddock, 65, did in fact suffer an angina attack, a painful contraction of blood vessels in the heart area.

This was followed by a coronary occlusion with myocardial infarction — "in layman's terms, a heart attack," Ptak said.

"In any event, the mayor's trouble went beyond angina."

After Haddock was felled last Tuesday, a terse announcement from acting mayor Tom Christie said the mayor suffered a heart attack.

Then, Monday night, Haddock left his hospital bed to telephone a radio hot line program. While he was "under medication," Ptak said, the mayor described his condition as angina only and said he would be back in harness at city hall soon.

Not so, said Ptak.

ABOUT THIS TIME LAST week a back-of-the-nose-tickle signalled an unwelcome message. Summer cold coming on, and as everyone knows, that kind is the hardest to shake.

For one thing, a summer cold rarely comes out and fights. It pesters and niggles. Its manifestations are a stuffy head, a sore throat, wandering aches and pains, and a general no-good feeling.

I lugged along until the weekend, when a choice presented itself. Give in to the sneaky virus and be miserable in bed, or head miserably up-Island as we'd planned.

What tipped the balance was a new fly-rod that needed testing — a labor of love that demands lively water, breeze, green outdoors and a more or less vertical stance.

"Anyway," Ron said, "I'll do the driving. You and your germs can take it easy on the back seat."

So Ron and Win loaded up while I straw-bossed the job as a privileged character. Then we angled through Saanich to a great north road burdened with the peak traffic of tourist season.

It grew on me that a summer cold does convey certain advantages.

A driver's freedom to look around is limited. He can never let his attention stray far from the road, whereas a back-seater can rubberneck at will. Then, when he has viewed his fill of cows in fields, mountains still snow-tipped and recreation vehicles of all styles and sizes, he can put his feet up and settle down for a nap. Sleep, after all, is the best healer.

Having delivered that unctuous pronouncement to the front-seaters, I slept clear up to Cougar Creek, a shaded waterbrook whose name enchants pilgrims from the smog-belt. One of its name-signs had been pinched perhaps to deck the wall of some city rumpus room.

At Shelter Bay we found Californians Gladys and Bert, who had trailered their 23-footer north behind their camper for a fishing holiday.

"Summer cold, eh?" Bert observed. He offered a bottle of curative stout, and suggested that a touch of salt air and a workout with a salmon might also be good medicine.

He was right. The cold began to retreat about the time an obliging six-pound coho hit in the good hole above Willow Point that evening. But I was still able to manage a pathetic cough or two next morning.

"What he needs," Ron prescribed at breakfast, "is good, hot sunshine to bake it out of him. I know a place that should be about right."

He drove us inland, first over blacktop then gravel, and finally on narrow red-earth roads that had once carried logging railway steel. That country has healed itself in the years since the loggers reaped, slash-burned and passed. It is clothed in young evergreen, with alder in the bottom-lands and blue lakes to temper its windless heat.

We came to a lake. A creek drained from it, chuckling through minor rapids or loafing deep and quiet as a meadow stream between brushy banks. Here was a perfect place for a man recovering from a summer cold to try a new fly-rod.

Ron warned me not to fall in, then vanished into the brush.

Win and I rigged up, crossed the creek by a set of decaying logs and found water to our liking.

The sun beat down. The stream flowed lazily. Across where water-lily pads edged a miniature cove, a fat little cutthroat trout flirted its tail at drifting insect. I tied a simulated wool-and-bucktail insect to my leader tip, and forgot to cough.

The new fly-rod couldn't have worked better. And though the saucy trout of the creek weren't large, this was idyllic fishing.

I enjoyed it until Ron and Win insisted that it would be better for my summer cold if we went back to the car.

The thing about a cold, summer or winter, is that it's going to run its course, as mine seems to have done. Naturally, I'm glad it's gone. But while it lasted, no guy with the miseries could have been more pampered!

U.S. Immigration To Canada Rising

By The Associated Press

Is another American immigration wave into Canada building up? Some Canadian officials fear so and believe that in the long run it might become more a matter of concern than American control of areas of the Canadian economy.

The official Canadian government policy is to welcome Americans and to play down any concern about rising numbers.

But some Canadian authorities are inclined to worry just the same.

Official figures made public recently show that 4,808 Americans entered Canada as landed immigrants in the first three months of 1971, as opposed to 4,194 in the first quarter of 1970.

By comparison, immigrants from Britian numbered 4,269 in the first three months this year, down from the 6,190 in the first quarter of 1970.

The number of immigrants from the United States has been increasing steadily from 14,148 in 1966 to 16,115 in 1967, to 17,075 in 1968 to 22,785 in 1969 to 24,424 in 1970.

Last year, in fact, the United States replaced Italy as the source of the second largest number of immigrants. Britian was still in first place, but only by a hairline margin.

But U.S. immigration figures are still small compared to some of the waves of the past.

In 1912, when the prairies were being settled, a total of 120,095 Americans came to Canada to live. In the decade from 1911 to 1920 the figure was 625,949.

In 1915, there were reported to be nearly one million U.S. immigrants living on the Canadian prairies.

During the American Civil War, about 15,000 army deserters, known as "skedaddlers," crossed into Canada. Upon amnesty granted in 1865, most of them returned home, leaving few traces, except for such place names as "Skedaddle Ridge" near Mapleton, in New Brunswick.

There are now at least 300 U.S. military deserters in Canada, but the number of American draft evaders is not known.

'TRADING VALUE' CITED

Arctic Gas 'Substantial'

By GARRY FAIRBARIN

OTTAWA (CP) — Substantial gas fields exist in Canada's Arctic and should be included in any estimate of Canadian gas supplies, a Dome Petroleum Ltd. witness told the National Energy Board today.

Exploration Manager John Andriuk said, however, that he could not provide a specific estimate of the Arctic supplies.

Dome Petroleum has an exploration permit covering 190,000 acres of King Christian Island and is planning a four-well drilling program there, he said.

J. W. S. McOuat, counsel for Union Gas Co. of Canada, asked why exploration companies are still holding Arctic information in confidence.

Mr. Andriuk said there is "a certain trading value" in the information.

The National Energy Board is holding the hearings to determine whether Canada can spare 2.7 trillion cubic feet of gas for export to the United States.

ASKS WESTERN HEARINGS

W. E. Richards, representing Dome Petroleum, asked the board to consider alternating future hearings between Eastern and Western Canada to enable greater participation by gas producers.

Neil J. Stewart, chairman of the hearing, said the board had seriously considered holding the present hearing in Calgary but for various reasons, including the TransCanada PipeLines Ltd. application to increase rates, the hearing had to be held in Ottawa.

"This is very much in the board's mind, Mr. Richards, and I think you can look forward with either terror or favor to having hearings held in Calgary."

Mr. Andriuk also said that the cost per unit of Arctic gas would not be significantly different than that of gas from the Alberta foothills, because of the large volumes of gas expected to be found in the Arctic.

Donald M. Wolcott, vice-president of Dome Petroleum, said his company's financing of Arctic exploration would be greatly assisted if the energy board encourages gas exports.

"How much do you know about the cost of moving gas out of the Canadian Arctic," asked James Cameron representative of TransCanada PipeLines.

"I have some estimates which I feel are not good enough to be put before this board," Mr. Wolcott answered.

In other testimony, Ross White of Calgary, gas sales representative for Amoco Canada Petroleum Co., said his firm has marketable gas reserves totalling 5,944 billion cubic feet in four major fields: East Cross, Martin Hills, Beaver River and Pointed Mountain.

Arrest Warrant Out In Double Murder

MONTREAL (CP) — Police have issued a warrant for the arrest of Michel Joly, 24, in connection with the slaying last weekend of two young girls who were out blueberry-picking.

Meanwhile, in the Laurentian community of St. Sauveur north of Montreal, some 60 volunteers joined police and tracking dogs in a search for two teen-age girls who disappeared Tuesday night from their summer camp.

Police helicopters were also being used in the search for Sandy Fox, 13, and Cathy Harris, 14, placed in the camp by a welfare agency.

Joly and another unidentified man are wanted in connection with the shooting deaths of Carole Marchand, 13, and Chantal Cote, 12. Their bodies were found in a wooded area four miles north of their homes in Cap de la Madeleine, 90 miles northeast of Montreal.

Both had been shot in the head, and an autopsy showed that the older girl had been sexually assaulted before being killed.

ALMOST GOT HIM

Sgt. Marcel Ste. Marie, acting director of the Quebec Provincial Police homicide squad, said his men had "just missed" arresting Joly Tuesday night, raiding a Montreal apartment building an hour after Joly left it.

The suspect is considered dangerous and may be armed.

A handprint was found on the trunk of the stolen car the slain girls were seen entering.

QPP officers staged a series of simultanious raids Tuesday on unoccupied summer cottages in Cap de la Madeleine and homes in Montreal.

A raid in an automobile scrap yard at Ste. Marthe provided police with the information that Joly had been seen in a Cap de la Madeleine hotel Sunday night and had left for Montreal Monday.

FBI Tough On China

WASHINGTON (AP) — J. Edgar Hoover has told Congress the FBI expects to step up its effort to combat Chinese "intelligence-gathering and revolution-inspiring activities" in the United States.

The FBI director said Peking considers the United States "its chief enemy."

Hoover made the statement to a closed Senate hearing three weeks before President Nixon announced plans to go to the People's Republic of China as a step toward normalization of relations.

The director's statement was released Monday as the Senate acted on a bill that includes FBI appropriations.

SAFEWAY CHALLENGES POP CAN CHARGES

NANAIMO (CP) — The first company charged with refusing to comply with British Columbia's new anti-litter laws pleaded not guilty in provincial court Tuesday.

Canada Safeway Ltd. is charged with refusing to refund two cents on each empty pop can taken to the store on June 29.

A former Nanaimo alderman, John Hancock, who pressed charges, claimed the company must pay for the empty cans despite having a sign posted which authorizes an agent to handle Safeway's refund payments. Judge Stanley Wardill set Aug. 23 as trial date.

S. Vietnam Launches Cambodia Attack

SAIGON (AP) — With support from United States helicopter gunships and B-52 bombers, 10,000 South Vietnamese troops launched a new operation in eastern Cambodia today designed to prevent the North Vietnamese from disrupting elections in South Vietnam next month.

The force encountered no immediate resistance. B-52 bombing raids preceded the drive.

The commander of the operation, Lt.-Gen. Nguyen Van Minh, said he hopes to smash the North Vietnamese 7th Division, numbering about 4,000 men, which has long operated across the border from South Vietnam's Tay Ninh province.

"Our mission is to cut off North Vietnamese infiltration into South Vietnam, to prevent the enemy from sabotaging the elections," said Minh.

SENT REINFORCEMENTS

The legislative elections are scheduled Aug. 29 and the presidential election Oct. 3.

Minh said his forces are operating about 20 miles inside Cambodia and 10 miles north of Highway 7.

Minh said the 10,000 troops involved in the operation were already in position at bases inside Cambodia, but he sent in a 200-vehicle armored column to reinforce them.

Cheque Jigsaw

BOISE, Idaho (AP) — Two dozen young bank employees have been holed up in a well-guarded room for a week, painstakingly piecing together some $800,000 worth of cheques that were inadvertently shredded for trash.

Some of the cheques have been photographed and all of them have been recorded, a bank spokesman said Monday. This has aided in the reconstruction of nearly $300,000 worth of cheques.

Earlier this month a janitor at the home office of the First Security Bank picked up what he thought was a bundle of trash and routinely ran it through the wastepaper shredder.

$1 Land Offer Recommended

Saanich lands committee recommended Tuesday night acceptance of a private offer of about 15,000 square feet of land for a nominal $1.

The land is on the south side of an Aske Homes and Construction subdivision off Kenneth Street and would be included in properties being assembled as part of the open space-park plan for Swan Lake Creek, which flows from Swan Lake to Colquitz Creek.

CHOU SEEKS RETREAT BEFORE TALKS

China Demands U.S. Pullout

FIRST BABY to be born in British Columbia on Centennial Day is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Lorne Cunningham, 26 Helmcken, posing with his mother at the Royal Jubilee Hospital. The seven pound seven ounce boy was born eight minutes after midnight Tuesday and is one of at least 11 babies whose parents will receive 100 silver dollars to mark their child's birth within 71 minutes of the province's 100th birthday. Also born at RJH, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Roy, 171 Bushby, barely made the 71-minute deadline, arriving on the dot of 1 a.m.

Taiwan Support May End

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. Senate Foreign Relations Committee voted today to repeal a resolution of congressional backing for use of U.S. forces to protect Taiwan.

The so-called Formosa Resolution was approved by Congress Jan. 29, 1955, at a time of Red Chinese pressure on the nationalist-held islands off the Chinese mainland, including Taiwan (also known as Formosa) and the Pescadores.

Chiang Kai-shek set up a Nationalist Chinese government on Taiwan after the Communists won the mainland.

Repeal of the resolution was proposed by Sens. Frank Church (D—Idaho) and Charles McC. Mathias (R—Md.).

NEUTRAL STAND

The state department took a neutral position on the question of repeal of the resolution which gave no grant of actual power to the president but served to back his hand in dealing with a crisis.

The repeal was introduced more than a year ago at the same time as the start of an effort which culminated in repeal of the Gulf of Tonkin Resolution on Vietnam.

The committee chairman, Sen. J. William Fulbright (D—Ark.), told reporters the committee action today was not directly related to President Nixon's planned visit to Peking, but conceded that the timing was not altogether a coincidence, either.

ECM DEBATE UNDER WAY

LONDON (AP) — Parliament opened debate on the European Common Market today with Conservative Prime Minister Edward Heath urging entry and Opposition Labor Leader Harold Wilson criticizing the terms.

● On Tuesday Wilson asked for an orderly debate, presumably a warning to his own party to avoid dividing on the issue. See Page 10.

MONTREAL STRUCK

MONTREAL (CP) — The target of the second 24-hour strike against Air Canada by its mechanics and ground personnel is Montreal International Airport.

A spokesman for the International Association of Machinists made the announcement just two hours before the scheduled 4 p.m. starting time for the walkout.

Air Canada said it planned to operate all flights in and out of the city as usual.

"We feel we can do it this time," a spokesman said.

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau has no plans to visit China next month, but he may take a vacation after a tour of the Atlantic region starting July 30, a spokesman said today.

Quit Asia, Nixon Told

By JOHN BURNS
Special to The Times

PEKING — Premier Chou En-Lai has made it emphatically clear that China's interest in normalization of relations with the United States will not be pursued at the cost of China's allies in Indochina.

In a three and a half hour encounter with a group of American students this week, the premier declared that a complete withdrawal of U.S. forces from Indochina must take priority over the search for improved Sino-American relations.

'Greatest Cry' for Withdrawal

Speaking in the general context of his invitation to President Richard Nixon to visit Peking, Premier Chou said the "greatest cry" of public opinion, both in the U.S. and elsewhere, is for the U.S. administration to withdraw its forces from Indochina.

"It might also be said that this demand is even stronger than the demand to restore the relations between the Chinese and American peoples, because the people of the United States do not want to sacrifice the lives of the American people in this dirty war. Isn't this so?" the premier said.

"Therefore we believe the question to be solved first should be the question of Indochina and by doing so we will be satisfying not only the interests of the Indochinese people but also the people of the United States," he added.

All of Indochina Included

In his remarks on the war, Mr. Chou made it clear that the demand for U.S. withdrawal went beyond Vietnam to "all of Indochina" — Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia. Moreover it covered "not only troops, but all military forces and all military installations."

In so defining the demand the premier appeared to go beyond the seven-point peace proposal made at the Paris peace conference on July 1 by negotiators for the National Liberation Front. A key aspect of the NLF proposals was that they specified a U.S. withdrawal only from Vietnam.

However, Mr. Chou made it clear that China stands by the support it has voiced through its official press for the NLF proposals. The proposals were "the only way to solve the problem" and enjoyed "our complete support," he said.

One of Four Obstacles

Earlier Chou cited the war in Indochina as one of four "obstacles" standing in the way of a normalization of Sino-American relations. He gave the others as the United States commitment to Taiwan, the situation in Korea and the revival of Japanese militarism.

The premier's remarks were conveyed to correspondents in Peking by spokesmen for the friendship delegation of the committee of concerned Asia scholars, a 15-member group which has been touring China for nearly four weeks. Before meeting with the correspondents the group checked their notes against a taped transcript of their conversation with Mr. Chou. In addition they won clearance from the Chinese foreign ministry for the wider circulation of his remarks.

Outspoken Opposition Policy

The scholars' group was founded three years ago and claims a membership of about 5,000, most on campuses in the United States. It has a policy of outspoken opposition to U.S. military involvement in Indochina. It also opposes the U.S. policy on Taiwan.

The delegation's meeting with Chou took place in the Great Hall of the People, in the same room in which Chou greeted members of the U.S. ping pong team during their landmark visit to China three months ago.

Apart from journalists, the scholars are the first large group of Americans to visit China since the ping pong team.

The premier said: "The governments of the two countries should bear the main responsibility for the normalizing of relations between the two countries and the restoration of their relations.

"Now, in the present day, in contracting your government to normalize relations we must contact those who are in authority in your country at present.

Tourists Jam Ferries

Ideal weather and the height of the tourist season are combining to produce traffic jams at B.C. Ferries terminals, particularly on the mainland side.

The company reported today delays of more than an hour at Tsawwassen, with many cars having to wait for a second ship.

At Swartz Bay, the terminal agent says "hardly any" cars are being left behind to wait for the next ferry.

Five ships are in operation on the run, with departures every hour on the hour from both sides, from 7 a.m. to 10 p.m.

B.C. Ferries operates more than 20 ferries around the island and to the mainland.

Tank 'Shoots Through the Air'

KAMLOOPS, B.C. (CP) — A burning propane tank car shot through the air like a skyrocket early today when a dynamite charge was used in an effort to ease gas pressure at the scene of a massive CNR derailment 16 miles northeast of here.

A CNR official at the scene said that apparently too much dynamite was used in the operation.

The plan was to blow a four-inch hole in the end of the tanker to ease pressure and reduce the chances of an explosion—allowing work crews to build bypass tracks around the wreck which has blocked the CNR mainline near Vinsulla, B.C., since Monday.

But the charge blew a fourfoot hole in the car and it went shooting through the air for 300 feet, struck the ground and bounced a further 1,200 feet.

The tanker shot over four big bulldozers parked at the scene without touching them.

There were no injuries. Workers had been cleared from the area for the blast.

Following the fireworks, the last remaining fires at the scene were extinguished.

More than 100 men worked this morning to build the bypass. Estimates of when the mainline would be opened for traffic ranged from 4 p.m. today to 9 a.m. Thursday.

The cause of Monday's derailment still was not known. A CNR spokesman said "the answer might be under that pile of boxcars," but added that once regular traffic resumes it may be several weeks before crews can remove the remains of about 50 cars destroyed in the crash.

COST UNKNOWN

Another railway official said the cost of the damage had not been estimated in detail, but likely would be more than $2 million.

Meantime, experts were trying to determine the extent of damage to area farms resulting from spilled sulphur and thick sulphur fumes that belched from the wreck for more than a day.

Residents of the communities of Vinsulla and Raleigh, north of Kamloops, reported the sulphur fumes were ruining gardens and alfalfa crops.

Dr. Hugh M. Richards, medical health officer for the south central region, warned them not to eat fresh fruit or vegetables showing signs of deterioration.

Sixty-five cars of a 94-car westbound freight were derailed on a flat stretch of farmland 16 miles northeast of Kamloops Monday. Two propane cars exploded, sending freight cars flying and spreading sulphur, lumber and other cargo into the fields.

Another two propane tankers blew up later and flames and heavy sulphur smoke belched from the wreckage through the night.

No one was injured.

The propane car was the last big obstacle in the way of crews trying to put down temporary track around the scorched wreckage. Three others survived, soot-blackened, and were hauled to safety Tuesday night.

The bypass, known as a shoofly, should be completed today. It will allow the railway to handle a backlog of 30 freight trains jamming sidings and marshalling yards in British Columbia and Alberta.

CNR freight was partially rerouted along CP Rail lines through Calgary Tuesday and along Pacific Great Eastern tracks to northern B.C. About 2,400 passengers were flown

HEROIN TRAFFIC JOINS TOP TEN

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Province says heroin trafficking rates as one of British Columbia's top 10 industries with annual sales estimated at $160 million.

The newspaper said street sales of the addictive drug represent five per cent of the province's entire retail sales output of $3.1 billion.

Estimates were made in consultation with police and the provincial Narcotic Addiction Foundation, based on an estimate of 10,000 heroin addicts made public last week by the B.C. Medical Association.

Of the 10,000 addicts, about 2,000 are known to be "older generation" addicts, using between five and eight capsules of heroin a day. Using the five-cap figure, these addicts consume about 10,000 caps a day.

The remaining "younger generation" addicts use between two and three caps a day each. Using the two-cap figure new addicts probably need a total 16,000 caps a day.

COST $15 A CAP

The average street price for one cap in Vancouver is $15.

This means that the 26,000 caps of heroin—about 2½ pounds needed every day in B.C.—is worth about $440,000 retail daily or $160.6 million annually.

Most of the heroin used in B.C. is called European white and comes mostly from the south of France, where opium grown in Turkey is made into morphine base and then heroin.

A kilogram of heroin is worth up to $750 at source, between $25,000 and $50,000 after being processed in Europe and between five and 10 times that much when it reaches the market in B.C.

There are 35.2 ounces in a kilogram and 400 to 600 capsules to an ounce, depending on dilution.

To Japanese It's Defence

Navy is a taboo word in Japan. It's replaced with "defensive."

Very politely — but firmly — Rear-Admiral Umeichi Imai rejected the word navy each time it came up Tuesday in a press conference aboard his flagship JDS Katori.

His answer adroitly fielded by the Japanese attache in Washington, Capt. Yasuhiro Tamagawa was always the same:

"We are very much defensive in nature."

He elabborated, "Since 1952 we have had the Japan Maritime Defence Force, Japan Land Defence Force and the Japan Air Defence Force."

ON TAPE

To guard against politically-unwise answers, one of the admiral's junior officers recorded the whole proceedings on tape.

The admiral explained this procedure was to give him an idea of what questions to expect when he visited other ports of call on this trip, which will include Montreal, Boston and New York.

Saying his country is not prepared "to spend big money" in defence, Imai added that Japan's new ships are very new and the ones to be built in the future will be raised from 3,500 to 4,500 tons.

An example of the rapidity in which Japan has been building up her maritime force is seen in the way in which she's replaced the ships loaned her by the United States.

ONLY FOUR

"The United States gave Japan several ships — 80 or 90 at the beginning. We have only four of them now."

Imai is in charge of Japan's training squadron and a gallery of his officers watched as we talked, among them a surgeon and an air liaison officer.

The admiral stressed that the Katori's main role was training. None of the helicopters she can carry were aboard.

With a top speed of 25 knots, the Katori was launched in Nov. 1968.

Imai was asked would Japan step up her maritime force in the event the U.S. withdrew her Seventh Fleet from the China Sea.

The admiral thought both events unlikely: "We don't expect big change."

ROAD SIGN SPREE BRINGS FINE

CHEMAINUS — Four men and a juvenile have been fined for pulling out 22 road signs in North Cowichan last week.

John Albert Cross, David Lorne Simmonds, Thomas Albert Jameson and Robert Allan Dubinsky, all of Chemainus, were fined $200 plus $51 restitution each. The juvenile was fined $25 plus $51 restitution.

Another juvenile is scheduled to appear later on the same charge of mischief.

Indians Bare $400M Project

WEST VANCOUVER (CP)—The Squamish Indian Band Tuesday announced plans for a $400 million real estate development on 450 acres of reserve land at the mouth of the Capilano River in West Vancouver.

The project, described as unique in North America, would provide revenue and employment for the band's 1,200 members for at least 25 years.

Chief Joe Mathias told a news conference the land cannot remain undeveloped and he described the project as one of the most exciting proposals ever undertaken by Indians.

He said the project will accommodate 20,000 persons in the upper- and middle-income groups. The land would be developed as a high-quality residential-commercial area, with schools, parks and community facilities.

Larry Wright, regional director of the Indian Affairs branch said his department is 100 per cent behind the development and Indians across North America would regard it as an example of what could be done.

The development will be carried out by the Indians and Park Royal Shopping Centre Ltd. Peter Finch, president of Park Royal, said the development will include townhouses, apartments, cluster housing, commercial and recreational facilities.

Name of the joint development company is Kapilano Salish Ltd.

The services of planning consultant Moshe Safdie, who helped prepare the Expo 67 master plan, have been retained.

Short-Term Loan Rates On Upswing: Banker

Short-term interest rates have bottomed and are likely to continue their recent upward trend, bank chairman Neil J. McKinnon said today.

In the private mortgage field the current average of around 10 per cent is likely to continue for the balance of 1971, he said.

McKinnon, of Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce, was here on a special visit marking the B.C. entry to Confederation 100 years ago Tuesday with the bank's first directors' meeting in Victoria.

It tied in with the formal opening by Premier Bennett of a new main branch in the Commerce building, Douglas at View.

McKinnon said prior to the directors' meeting that the Canadian economy is on the upswing and should show a net national product growth of 5 per cent this year, based on an over all increase of 8½ per cent and about 3½ per cent allowance for inflation.

Next year should see better balance and higher employment in the general economy, although the risk of inflation is still present. Costs will continue to rise, McKinnon said.

In fact, the rise in the consumer price index will probably be more pronounced in the latter half of this year than at the same time last year," he added.

He told directors the gross national product this year should total $91.5 billion.

Asked what could be done to keep inflation under control while permitting economic growth, the banker said reduction of government spending and lower taxes would be effective. It was hard to single out the area that could act most decisevely, unless it is government, he aid.

At the same time, referring to the general influence of government on the economy, McKinnon claimed that less control is desirable and there should be a great deal more informed, intelligent, public debate on direction of the economy.

The banker was impressed by B.C.'s record of economic growth despite such problems, as a thin lumber market. B.C. has resiliency and potential, he said.

Over supply of B.C. forest products and the disadvantage of the Canadian dollar in foreign exchange will resolve themselves, McKinnon predicted.

"The attraction of B.C. for both people and capital to develop its resources and take advantage of its unique and beautiful environment offers keen competition to the rest of Canada," McKinnon said.

... CHINA DEMANDS

Your president has said that he wishes to move towards friendship with China and he also has said that he hopes to visit China. And so, of course, naturally, we invited him. And this can promote the normalization and improvement of the relations between the two countries."

The premier recalled that China had originally put out feelers to the United States in 1955, inviting several American journalists to visit here.

The journalists had accepted, but John Foster Dulles, then secretary of state, had quashed the idea.

The Dulles' veto had had its effect but had now been pushed aside by the pressure of the two people. "The foremost thing is that the Chinese and American peoples want to exchange visits with each other and this strong desire has broken through these barriers," Chou said.

The premier indicated that he attributes much of the pressure for closer comntacts to young people. "It is your generation that has broken through these barriers," he told the scholars. "We must thank the new forces of your era."

On the subject of Taiwan, Chou said nothing new, but he made it clear that China is not prepared to alter its position in order to promote a rapprochement with the United States.

The essence of that position was that the People's Republic of China is the sole legitimate government of the Chinese people and if Washington wanted to establish diplomatic relations with Peking it would have to acknowledge the fact.

Nor would China accept any compromise solution which involved the recognition of an independent Taiwan.

The CNR said it hopes to restore mainline traffic by Thursday. Cause of the derailment has not been determined.

Kamloops Fire Chief Frank Flayers said:

"Anyone within a quarter mile of the train when the second car blew would have been fried. I haven't seen anything like it since the last war when the RAF was shooting up German munition trains."

Draft Boards Try To Avoid 'Hot Water'

By ROBERT C. MAYNARD

WASHINGTON (WP) — Even though its authority to induct is still bottled up in a House-Seante conference, the selective service is going ahead with a draft lottery on Aug. 5 so that the men who are assigned low numbers can "plan ahead."

The draft induction authority expired June 30, while the house and senate leadership wrangled in congress over an amendment to the bill calling for U.S. troops to be withdrawn from Indo-China in nine months.

In the absence of any indication of when the deadlock will be broken, the selective service decided to go ahead with the lottery, allowed by law, so that men to be inducted in 1972 will know of the likelihood of being drafted.

The announcement Tuesday also serves to alert young men who might have hoped otherwise that the draft is still around.

For every young man drafted, selective service says that three others volunteer and then have their preference of service and specialties. What worries selective service is that with the draft law languishing in conference, young men will begin thinking the draft is a thing of the past.

HOT WATER

"The danger occurs," one selective service official said, "at the point at which draft-motivated guys think the draft isn't coming back. Then we're really in hot water."

Unless some substantial progress is made in Paris toward a negotiated settlement of the war, the proponents of the Mansfield amendment to pull out in nine months are not likely to give in before congress adjourns Aug. 6 for a month's summer holiday.

"It really isn't too bad yet," a draft official said, "because everybody figures the draft is coming back in a short time."

July and August are good volunteer months for the armed services, when young men just out of school frequently decide to join the service.

But draft officials concede that if the law is not passed as fall comes, then it will face a "truly critical" situation, as one official put it.

Hospital Set To Buy Land

The Southern Vancouver Island Hospital Society Tuesday ratified a land purchase agreement which will clear the way for expansion of St. Joseph's Hospital adjacent to its present site.

The society, headed by Dr. Alec Wood, is the body scheduled to take over operation of the hospital from the founding Sisters of St. Ann.

The Sisters have already agreed to the sale of 4.75 acres of their adjoining land and it remains for two other bodies, Victoria City Council and the Capital Regional Hospital Board, to ratify earlier approval of the deal.

City aldermen will consider the matter at their meeting Thursday. The Regional Hospital Board meets next Wednesday.

Campfire Warning

Restrictions on campfires may become necessary if forest fire hazards continue to rise in British Columbia, the B.C. Forest Service warned today.

But no action is planned for the time being.

A fire near Port Hardy which was battled by 150 men has been contained to 12 acres and is now being mopped up. An outbreak near Parksville was quickly brought under control.

Men Jailed In Assault

Two men were sentenced to two years in prison today by Judge William Ostler for assaulting a 14-year-old youth and stealing $7.45 from him.

Rodney C. Fraser, 21, of 1266 Johnson, and Allan Louie, 20, of 1281 Pembroke, pleaded guilty Tuesday to assaulting the youth and taking his money in the early morning in the 1200-block Johnson. (See earlier story on Page 40.)

1,500 Guerrillas 'Returning Home'

AMMAN (Reuter) — More than 1,500 Palestinian Arab guerrillas who abandoned bases in northern Jordan are returning to their homes either in Jordan or in neighboring Arab states, the government newspaper reported here today.

The Al-Rey said 39 other guerrillas have decided to remain under arms and fight on "in the path of genuine and true resistance against Israel."

Of the 1,537 to return home, Al-Rey said 397 would leave for Syria at their own request and 311 others would join their families in other Arab countries.

INTERNATIONAL naval assembly and sailpast that took place off Beacon Hill Park Tuesday was one of the outstanding events that marked the day British Columbia joined Canadian Confederation. Jubilant Crowd Lines Shore For B.C. Centennial Show

Never had a Victoria crowd been more massive — or more jubilant — than the one that jammed the waterfront Tuesday to celebrate the day that British Columbia joined Confederation.

Long before dusk fell and the four Esquimalt-based destroyer escorts offshore were illuminated in lights, Dallas Road and Beacon Hill Park were a solid mass of people.

Victoria police estimated that the crowd was two — or even three — times as large as the one that gathered when the Queen left after her visit to Vancouver Island May 11.

SHOW OF LIGHTS

Keeping steam up to stay on station, HMCS Qu'Appelle, HMCS St. Croix, HMCS Mackenzie and HMCS Gatineau had their outlines illuminated in lights as darkness fell.

The lights went out and in unison each ship put up a barrage of colorful fireworks that lit the skies.

Each burst was greeted with rounds of cheers onshore, magnificent in the still, sultry air.

The men on the ships were greeted by their own show of lights. Supplementing the lights of the city were those of the visiting ships alongside.

STRIKING OUTLINE

Among them was the Colombian training barque Gloria, her spars and rigging etched in a striking outline.

Meanwhile, an estimated 20,000 persons celebrated the 100th anniversary of British Columbia's entry into Confederation — at Vancouver's Empire Stadium.

Chief Dan George, star of the movie Little Big Man, brought a serious note to the celebration in delivering a "Soliloquy for All Seasons."

With 10 members of his family accompanying him on Indian instruments and chanting, Chief George made an impassioned plea for British Columbians to help the Indian regain his place in society.

NO SUCH PRIDE

"Looking over the past 100 years, you can be proud of B.C.," he said. "We cannot look back at our past with such heartfelt pride. Why are we called Indians when you are called Canadians? Why is it that we who once owned this land are now marred by the highest unemployment rate, the highest school drop-out rate and the lowest income rate?

"Perhaps our people, like Rip Van Winkle, have been sleeping on our reservations and life has grown up around us.

"Your past one hundred years has been glorious, ours has been sad. In that time in Canada and the United States, Indian wars nearly decimated us but not quite — remember the Little Big Horn. We are a people that want to be loved, not pitied, that wants help but not in the form of social welfare handouts."

Chief George ended on an optimistic note, saying:

"As long as the sun will rise, as long as the grass will grow and as long as the river flows, I have hope."

BARELY LEGAL

VANCOUVER (CP) — Sun-worshippers who frequent Vancouver's most secluded beach are doing their thing "au naturel" this year.

And even the police are turning a blind eye to the stripping off that's going on.

Last year nudists were arrested on charges of indecent exposure. The charges were upheld in provincial court but later dropped. The B.C. Supreme Court ruled that nudity is not necessarily indecent.

An RCMP spokesman said: "We know naked people are sunbathing on the beach but the attorney-general's office has not given permission to try and make arrests."

John Redford, 19, of Vancouver said: "No-one gives anyone else any hassle. If people want to keep their clothes on that's up to them.

"Personally I think they're missing out on something. There's no better feeling in the world than the freedom of going naked."

This Man's Serious On Nude Swim Rules

BURLINGTON, Vt. (AP) — The Chittenden County state's attorney, Patrick J. Leahy, has offered serious advice to law enforcement officers confronted with public bathing in the nude.

"1. In public areas and semi-public areas; nude bathing is not acceptable. In such instances, the officer receiving the complaint should order the person to dress. Failure to stay dressed should result in a summons to court.

"2. On private land out of view of the public; the state has no legitimate interest and swimmers should be left alone.

"3. In secluded areas sometimes publicly used e.g. rivers, swimming holes, etc.; if no member of the public present is offended, no disorderly conduct has taken place. If members of the public e.g. families wishing to use the swimming area complain, then proceed as in No. 1 above."

In a memo to all police departments in the state, Leahy said he investigated the matter thoroughly, "reviewing the old Norman Rockwell paintings . . . showing such activities allegedly taking place in Vermont."

"Along this line," Leahy said, "I was unable to either confirm or refute the persistent rumor that Vermont's No. 1 politician, Calvin Coolidge, has also engaged in such activities within the borders of the state while still subject to Vermont Laws."

Leahy said: "Each member of this office offered to investigate this matter in an undercover manner, so to speak."

No Inspection Of Soup

WASHINGTON (AP) — A plant where vichyssoise was packed had not been inspected for sanitation by the United States Food and Drug Administration since May, 1967, four years before a Westchester, N.Y. man eating the soup died of botulism poisoning.

Federal records also show an agriculture department inspector had watched the manufacturing process at the Bon Vivant plant in New Jersey the day before the soup was packed. Inspectors were not responsible for the soup, however, but were watching meat and poultry canning.

The federal government ordered a recall of all Bon Vivant-packed products and closed the plant after the Westchester man died June 30.

The New Jersey department of health, which has a co-operative agreement with the FDA for drug plant inspection but not for food manufacturers, had not inspected Bon Vivant since October, 1966. An agency spokesman blamed manpower shortages.

The agriculture department, however, had held inspections 10 times this year and on the same production line as the one packaging the soup.

SNATCHER BUSTED

PITSEA, England (UPI)—When a bus load of old-age pensioners saw a man snatch an old lady's handbag, two of the men jumped off the bus and gave chase.

But they lost him in a crowd. For half an hour the bus drove around looking for him. Finally, just as they were giving up, they spotted him—trying to thumb a ride.

"He hailed our coach and we invited him aboard," said one of the passengers. "His face was a picture when he realized what he had walked into. When he turned to run we grabbed him and sat on him until we got him to a police station."

One Juvenile Age

WITH AN APPEAL PLANNED to the Supreme Court of Canada, no comment can be offered on the merits of the case involving juveniles whose previous convictions under the provincial juvenile act were quashed by the Court of Appeal of British Columbia.

What is apparent, however, and open to comment, is the frustration and confusion resulting from various definitions of a juvenile by different authorities.

The age at which a young person ceases to be a juvenile, and hence, no longer subject to the special juvenile legislation, must necessarily be arbitrary. No scientific means have been devised to decide at which birthday the individual has become competent enough to justify transfer to open court. For that matter, precautions are taken in open court to determine the competence of many accused persons who have attained their majority.

On the issue of age, however, some cut-off is fixed. A youth comes under the provisions of the juvenile act up to a certain date in his life. After that, those provisions cease to apply.

Over the years, disparities in provincially established juvenile age limits have created the illogical situation in which a course of conduct legal in one part of Canada becomes a crime in another part. A case in point is the position in which a young man can find himself after setting up a common law arrangement with a girl above the juvenile age where the liaison is undertaken and then moving to a province in which the girl is below the juvenile age limit set by the latter's legislature. Under these circumstances, the male involved can be charged with contributing to juvenile delinquency merely by crossing the provincial border.

Different provinces advance arguments favoring different juvenile age limits. Some want them raised. Some want them lowered. Some have distinguished between males and females. Inevitable difficulties arise from this individuality in choice.

In this field, as in so many others involving legislation, uniformity seems essential if courts are to avoid confusion, if legal process is to escape unnecessary expense in time and money — and if it is to recognize equality before the law for all Canadians, regardless of provincial domicile.

This surely is an issue which can and should be settled by Parliament. Parliament has authority to set a uniform juvenile age limit across Canada and should do so. The preservation of a system which permits variations of the existing nature is a continuing invitation to trouble.

Profit and Public Service

SHOULD AIR CANADA OPERate at a profit or should its operations be subsidized? The economic question turns on a mixed political and legal one: How much autonomy should a Crown Corporation like Air Canada possess? At a time when management policies are under scrutiny because of the machinists' rotating strikes, the problem of public and national interest as pertaining to the airline deserves cool consideration.

The Air Canada problem came up several days before the present strike broke into the news. Manitobans are unhappy over Air Canada's reluctance to funnel work to an air maintenance base in Winnipeg. The matter was the subject of discussions between a Maniboba delegation and members of the federal cabinet. Transport Minister Donald Jamieson disclosed at the time that he is reviewing the situation to determine the degree of pressure which could be brought to bear on Air Canada "in terms of what we see as being the national interest."

In terms of general public concern and interest the airline ranks between the highly sensitive CBC and the profitable Polymer Corporation. Serving so many people, Air Canada is quite rightly subject to considerations which could, on occasion, put profitability second to public convenience. And yet a Crown Corporation's profit is in the public interest, too. A mean between two interests — public convenience and public profit — will have to be achieved. Mr. Jamieson will not have an easy task finding the proper balance. As in so many political matters, there is a conflict between two aspects of the public good and its resolution will not come easily or be permanent in nature.

Care of the Elderly Infirm

THE PROBLEM OF THE state's role in the provision of care for retired and infirm people is one that a healthy society must face. The province of Alberta has moved into the area, the first province to do so, and recognizes old age as a public health problem.

Through the Alberta Nursing Home Plan an approved patient is subsidized to the extent of $5.25 per day and care is available in contract nursing homes at an additional cost to the patient of $3.50 per day for a standard ward, $5.50 per day for a semi-private room and $8.50 per day for a private room. There is a residency requirement which ensures that applicants shall be bona fide residents of a certain duration in the province. The Nursing Home Act of 1964 and appended regulations provide a comprehensive scheme for the elderly who need care. People on welfare are provided for by means of other programs.

Those who have worked conscientiously and who have saved frugally while in their prime should have more to look forward to than the unfortunate status which faces so many who live longer than their meagre savings provide.

British Columbia should begin to investigate the possibility of enacting similar provisions for the elderly here. The argument that the climate in the southwestern part of the province would attract too many could be overcome by suitable residence requirements. Alberta has begun to act on a matter which will, sooner or later, concern us all. Ontario will follow next April. This province has no reason to fall behind.

If the Boomerang Comes Back . . .

THE SYMBOLISM OF THE boomerang is appropriate in the attack by Britain's deputy Labor leader, Roy Jenkins, on Australia for its attitude toward the projected British entry into the European Common Market.

Mr. Jenkins makes an honest pitch when he champions entry. This was the position taken by many of his party's leaders a relatively short time ago. When he makes a primary target of the Australians for their alleged charge that Britain has let their country and the Commonwealth down, however, he runs certain political risks. Mr. Jenkins' senior, Harold Wilson, has been dancing to the anti-market tune.

If the weapon Mr. Jenkins threw boomerangs—and it could easily enough in the present air currents of the Labor Party—who's to duck? Mr. Jenkins? Or Mr. Wilson?

"Whatever you do there, don't leave any fingerprints."

THE YOUNG IN SUMMER

By BRUCE HUTCHISON

The Hitch-Hiker Will Hold the Wheel

IT will be a great loss to Canada if the idea behind the Opportunities for Youth program is discredited because the government has botched it in execution. For the idea is excellent. Indeed, it is essential. A nation which fails to give its youth a chance of summer employment, self-respect and a baptism of real life will pay a price for its failure a little later on, a price far larger than the immediate waste of money.

Hutchison

It is always difficult, or impossible for older people to see things through youthful eyes but those eyes will not be youthful for long. Life goes on. Within a few years the kids hitch-hiking by the road, and others like them, will be running the country. When you give a lift to some ragged boy he is, perhaps, a potential prime minister, an unlikely-Trudeau in blue jeans, in hope or in despair. At any rate, he is a future voter, and his attitude toward our society, with that of his contemporaries, will decide its future as well.

Waste

This fact is so obvious that one apologizes for mentioning it but, like most obvious facts, it is usually overlooked. What mainly interests the public today is the current loss of its money on foolish youth projects which are easily understood and rightly criticized, but the government is wasting much more on thousands of other things incomprehensible even to Parliament.

In politics, you might almost say, it is the little absurd things that ruin governments. This is why Secretary of State Gerard Pelletier has become such a political liability to Prime Minister Trudeau. His mistakes are shouted in black headlines. The bigger mistakes are buried in the fine print of the budget papers that hardly anyone ever reads.

The fate of Mr. Pelletier and the government is a small matter. What happens to the next generation is supremely important but of course neither the young nor the old can foresee it.

You might suppose, from the complaints of the young, that our society was ruined already, that youth had no opportunities at all when most of it is doing fine. You might suppose, from the complaints of the old, that youth was debauched and drugged beyond recovery when most of it is probably just as sensible as its elders.

However that may be, youth is wrong if it imagines that the world owes it an easy living, without labor, at someone else's cost, and age is wrong if it imagines that the good old days of its own youth will ever return.

Some of us remember another time when we cut fire wood for a dollar a cord, or worked on a farm to clear maybe $50 for the whole summer and thought we were lucky. That experience, we tell ourselves, was good for us. It bred a strong, self-reliant generation and built a good sound society. Did it? The current young are unlikely to think so.

They see, instead, a world which, in half a century, has produced two great wars, with a great depression between them, and now, in an atmosphere poisoned by its economic success, seems unable to solve even such a simple problem as unemployment combined with inflation. In youthful eyes the old have botched everything as badly as Mr. Pelletier has botched his summer program.

The young will find, in due time, that these things are not as simple as they look, or the old as stupid and wicked. Meanwhile it is ridiculous to say that the nation cannot provide summer jobs for youngsters who cannot get them otherwise and are prepared to work for their pay.

It is equally ridiculous to say that they should be paid inflated union wages lest they break down our standard of living when, in fact, they will improve it if their work is properly chosen and directed. More importantly they will improve themselves — the true object of the exercise. And if they cannot get work, at reasonable wages that private employers or the taxpayers can afford to pay, then their discontent and desperation will be expressed in more costly fashion, once they have taken control of society not long from now.

Our difficulty here, as throughout society, is to keep things in proportion, to remember that the vast majority of the young is not in trouble, that most older Canadians are still prosperous, that Canadian society, on the whole, is the most fortunate in the world and that the problem of summer employment for the small minority is quite manageable, if we have a lick of common sense.

The government was right in recognizing the immediate need of temporary summer jobs, as distinguished from long-term economic problems. But it was very late in this decision, threw together a remedy in sudden panic and put it into the wrong hands. Now we are witnessing the results.

Some of the most deserving young get no help. Some who deserve no help are receiving it. Some of the local projects most useful to society are neglected. Some of the most idiotic are financed by the taxpayers.

Losing Confidence

Naturally the taxpayers are outraged (though they have much stronger reasons for outrage). The young are disappointed. The government is losing votes. Much worse, the nation is losing confidence in an idea which deserved a fair chance of success and didn't get it.

Perhaps we have learned something in this first bungled experiment and next year may manage it more sensibly. We had better. Above all, we had better understand that we are not dealing here with a merely economic problem, a table of statistics. We are dealing with a complex psychological problem, with young human beings, and with the future state of the nation's mind.

Avoiding The Bumpy Pitch

By DAVID HUMPHREYS, from London

THE Pakistani cricket team has played out its full tour of England without one single demonstration. The visitors lost the series of international test matches with England. They retreated before rainy weather. But they triumphed in every other way. Veteran cricket writer John Arlott writes that they "were the more impressive side" despit the losses. Indeed, throughout the tour the cricket writers have been able to confine their comment to the sport itself. And for those who believe in the separation of sports and politics, the Pakistanis have achieved a remarkable triumph.

Humphreys

During their tour The Sunday Times published a report by West Pakistani Anthony Mascarenhas charging the massacre of thousands of civilians in East Pakistan by the West Pakistan army. Four British MPs were shocked after a tour of East Pakistan. One said that what they say "underlines completely the fact that the propaganda of the West Pakistan government is completely false and they are responsible for an enormous amount of human suffering." There were many eye-witness reports about the suffering of six million refugees.

Yet the cricketers played on. Bangla Desh organizations passed resolutions and made their protest at the beginning of the tour. But there were no politicians whipping up public indignation about what was happening in the cricketers homeland; no rallies in Trafalgar Square; no mob scenes at the cricket pitches; no threats to obstruct play.

Demonstrations Last Year

Demonstrations interrupted most of the South African rugby team's games last year. The threat of violence was believed to be one reason for cancellation of the cricket tour last summer. Now it is reported that the real reason was an ultimatum from West Indian governments that unless the tour was cancelled they would never allow teams to play England again.

South Africa practises a form of discrimination, restriction and coercion against colored citizens; the policy extends to the racial selection of cricket teams and all other national teams. Pakistan practises a sectarian policy that causes six million citizens to flee and suffer and die on a scale unknown in South Africa; that policy does not extend to selection of cricket teams.

Yet the crowds last year were never content to condemn the sporting discrimination. They protested and politicians preached about the total evil of the South African regime. How fickle is public opinion. How emotive is racial discrimination that it can do more than genocide to raise the righteous indignation of the masses.

Emerging unscathed, the Pakistanis are now free to go to the international cricket meeting pressing the Australians to have nothing to do, under threat of isolation, with those nasty South Africans.

FROM ROME

By C. L. SULZBERGER

The Classical Lesson in Decline

WHEN President Nixon gloomily reflected a few days ago on whether the United States was destined to emulate ancient Rome and fade away in a welter of decadence, the people of this city were given particular food for thought. For, since the days of its republican and Caesarian grandeur, Rome has declined with a kind of baroque solemnity and even today is entering on new and perplexing troubles. Commenting on the pseudo-classical architecture of U.S. public buildings, Nixon admitted: "Sometimes when I see those columns I think of seeing them in Greece and in Rome. I think of what happened to Greece and Rome and you see only what is left of great civilizations of the past. As they become wealthy, as they lost their will to live, to improve, they became subject to the decadence that destroys the civilization. The United States is reaching that period."

Sulzberger

Edward Gibbon devoted his life to investigating the reasons for Rome's decline and fall and discerned a pattern. As decadence became evident, he wrote that Decius "soon discovered that it was impossible to replace that (Roman) greatness on a permanent basis, without restoring public virtue, ancient principles and manners, and the oppressed majesty of the law."

But successive Roman leaders failed to support such principles. Thus, Carinus "abandoned himself to the luxury of the capital and to the abuse of his fortune . . . devoted to pleasure, but destitute of taste; and though exquisitely suscepible to vanity, indifferent to the public esteem."

Meanwhile, "great numbers of provincials rather chose to live as exiles and outlaws than to support the weight of civil society." And a situation developed in which "every teacher, either of truth or of falsehood, every founder, whether of a virtuous or a criminal association, might easily multiply his disciples or accomplices."

The citizens of the Roman Republic first abandoned leadership responsibilities to an aristocratic and eventually autocratic class and then that class gradually lost its moral and intellectual distinction and capacity to lead.

It is known that Nixon, long before the latest crisis on Vietnam and the economy, had been disturbed by what he considered a leadership crisis in every branch of American society.

Decadence is a special disease unrelated to intellectual evolution. Three basic moments in European history critically changed human destinities but none involved political decay. The first was the quarter-century between Aristotle and the Stoics when the all-powerful position of the state yielded to conceptions of individual liberty.

The second, following Machiavelli, produced the realization that no one could be both a good man and a good statesman. And the third, stemming from the 18th-century Romantic movement, fostered new lines of political thinking including the Italian Fascist aberration.

But decline of great nations responds to other human rules. Almost inevitably decadence follows an era when a country has become excessively prosperous and, consequently overconfident, has extended its authority beyond the realm of its capacity. It then suffers a moral decline when it finds its dreams of grandeur are unsound.

Americans had always assumed themselves to be a chosen people annointed with a new-world innocence untainted by old-world corruption. When they were drawn into that old world they excused the adventure by moralistic reasoning which sought to explain that it was a national and ethical duty to oppose the evil of Communism wherever it appeared, just as Fascism-Nazism had previously been opposed.

Assumptions Disappeared

These Manichean assumptions have now begun rapidly to disappear as the the assumption of inherent virtue in Roman citizenship disappeared or the British belief in a benevolent obligation to carry the "white man's burden" into Asia and Africa while assuring markets for the Midlands textile factories.

Nixon's pessimistic musing was notable for its honesty. Contemporary indications are that he will have no more success than did Decius in halting the decline "without restoring public virtue, ancient principles and manners, and the oppressed majesty of the laws."

This has suddenly become America's primordial problem. As the President said: "The critical question is whether the United States will be a healthy nation in terms of its moral strength." When that same question was posed in ancient Rome the answer was a flat no.

"THEY DON'T 'PRECIATE US NEXT DOOR, SO WE'VE COME TO LIVE WITH YOU!"

Looking Back

From the Times of July 21, 1911:

The first item of business to be discussed at the meeting of the city council tonight will be the question of the proposed city pipe yard, and it is to be expected, if all the aldermen are present, that a lively discussion will ensue. Perhaps no municipal question of recent times has created so much antagonism as the location of the pipe yard. Aldermen who formerly opposed the idea of having it placed in the Spring Ridge district are now in favor of it, while others hold to their original conviction that the proposed site is not central enough.

Canada 'Rigged' Against Poor

By BOB HUNTER
The Sun

As far back as last October, Ian Adams — one of the writers who quit the Senate Committee on Poverty to write a "renegade report" — was certain that the official report would turn out to be a fraud.

"We'll probably have to quit," he said. "(Senator David) Croll wants a flashy report so he can make a pitch for a Guaranteed Annual Income, but he won't want to get right down to the nitty-gritty."

Adams had offered me a job as co-author of the Senate report. I turned it down. The job would have paid $2,000 a month, plus weekly travel expenses between Vancouver and Ottawa.

Even with that kind of income, I would probably have still been one of the lower-paid people working on the project. If, the writers were getting $2,000 a month, and the senators were collecting their $22,000 a year plus expenses, and all those economists and social workers and whatnot were running around — well, the mind boggled at how much was being spent to "help" the poor without any of that money actually getting into their grubby little hands.

Adams, a Toronto media mafia person and author of The Poverty Wall, said at the time he felt certain that Senator Croll was going to apply all the pressure he could to water down the findings of his committee. In short, the Senate Report on Poverty would be a cynical political ploy.

In April, like a stage production the script of which, I'd already had a peek at, the drama unfolded. Adams quit in protest "because the chairman of the Senate Committee on Poverty did not want to accept a candid appraisal of our society." Writer Bill Cameron also quit, along with economists Peter Penz and Brian Hill. And in the latest issue of Last Post magazine, they have published their renegade report on poverty.

It amounts to 30,000 words. The picture it paints of what life in Canada is really like — if you are not one of the favored people — is quite at odds with the kinds of lollipop commercials thrown at us by so many of our politicians — especially the ones of the don't-make-a-wave variety.

In terms of throwing light on the functionings (if that's what it can be called) of government and its real relationship to ordinary people in this country, the renegade report on poverty is in its way as biting and informative as the now-famous Pentagon Papers.

The central criticism it makes is that the economy does not serve the needs of the majority of the people of this country. Canada has a higher rate of unemployment than any other advanced industrial nation, despite the fact that the past decade has been one of consistent economic growth — the Gross National Product having risen between 1961 and 1970 from $39.1 billion to $83.4 billion.

The system, according to the authors of this report, is rigged through and through against the poor and it is double-rigged to make sure that the people with lots of money keep their money.

That, surely, will come as a surprise to no one but my maiden aunt, the one who weeps when the Queen delivers her Christmas greetings.

But in terms of the way the rigging of the system is engineered, the renegade report on poverty is probably the most eye-opening document to appear since the publication of John Porter's book, The Vertical Mosaic.

Canada — a classless open society with equal opportunity for all? How is it then that five per cent of the people at the top of the social pyramid receive 15 per cent of the total net income, and almost 40 per cent of the total money received as income in this country is taken in by the 20 per cent of the people at the top?

The richest five per cent take in an average of $25,000 to $30,000 a year. The poorest fifth of the families in 1969 received an average of $2,500 to $3,000. Moreover, this terrific imbalance in the income distribution has remained virtually unchanged for more than 20 years, except to the extent that between 1951 and 1969 the top fifth gained more than the lowest fifth received in total income.

The authors of the renegade report point out that if the total amount of income were shared equally among the population, income would even out at roughly $7,900 a year.

In 1971, there are more than 4.5 million Canadians living in poverty. A third of these people are children under the age of 16, and two-thirds of all these people are malnourished.

SLOW CANADIAN PENDULUM TILTS TOWARDS SOCIALISM

After 16 months in the parliamentary press gallery, a West Coast reporter returning home sums up his impression that the political stance of the country is in a much more profound upheaval than is generally appreciated.

By JOHN MIKA
Times Ottawa Bureau

MIKA

OTTAWA — For some time now, Canada has been like an unprepared climber aware only of the agony as he struggles the last few feet towards a summit.

With pounding heart, grasping breath, twitching muscles and sweat-bleared eyes fixed on the final rocky pitch, he is blind to the panoramic perspective behind him and oblivious to the explorations of a new watershed awaiting him on the other side of the peak.

In like manner, many of the Trudeau administration's weaknesses throb in the foreground of national consciousness.

But almost unnoticed is its labored progress over a major divide in Canada's development which promises to propel the nation down a far slope into political, economic and social terrain that is unfamiliar.

The pinnacle probably was reached in the final days before the summer recess of Parliament when Consumer and Corporate Affairs Minister Ron Basford introduced his bill to replace the combines statute with a competition act.

Much more than a change of title is involved. This well could be the viewpoint from which one can briefly scan the new valley below and glimpse some of its distant features before the headlong plunge into virgin territory gathers momentum.

•

For the proposed competition act undoubtedly is a high point in the historical landscape — in terms of both nationalism and social outlook — establishing it as a landmark guide to the changing horizons ahead.

Its insistence on registration of all intentions by foreigners to take over Canadian concerns and its special tribunal to adjudicate whether any mergers — domestic or foreign-controlled — will be allowed for the public good certainly are of great importance.

But the bill's supreme import is a symbolic one, for underlying this legislative tip is a massive though slowly-developed shift in philosophy.

It is this shift in philosophy that makes it highly likely the competition act is only the first in a long series of legislative changes which will transform the national lifestyle.

And it is this shift which underlies the finally apparent collapse of the Progressive Conservative Party as the New Democratic Party gathers strength in a scissoring action which eventually may cut politics back to a two-party system.

These are merely the Canadian manifestations of wider change taking place in the philosophical foundation on which most western countries are based.

Peace Tower

Like a slow pendulum, this change has been developing for centuries and probably the pollution concerns of recent years marked the return of the swing.

Originally, with absolute monarchs claiming to be the embodied state, commercial enterprise was licensed directly by the crowned head to operate in such manner as he determined. This was based on the philosophy that what was good for the king automatically was good for the state since he was the state.

But the nation state is the public itself and its social purpose was often ignored for the king's private purpose — hence a rash of revolutions down through history.

Laissez-faire capitalism was the radical answer to this situation, the swing of the pendulum the other way.

Its justification was that through the instrument of private profit, every member of the public was able to automatically serve the public good by commercial enterprise since the state was nothing but a collection of individuals — the best of whom were measured by their production of wealth.

But too many cheated their way to riches so the government, in the name of the state, had to intervene with laws to curb abuses of untrammeled private enterprise.

Child labor laws, minimum wage legislation, strengthened securities legislation, increasing consumer protection and such things as the anti-combines statute were all facets of this government role as guardian over the public good.

•

But despite this expanding role, government never could catch up with all abuses and eventually the ironic saying "what's good for General Motors is good for the country" showed the philosophic pendulum had swung to an extreme position again.

A growing chorus has been shouting the question for several decades now: What is the purpose of business activity — a better profit or a better society?

The transparent failure of the private profit technique to absorb and pay the costs of protecting the environment and the demonstration of the space race that governments using a systems approach rather than ideology can accomplish almost anything, started the pendulum swinging back again towards insistence on public prosperity overriding private gain.

In Canada, this has brought the competition act proposal which would empower the government to make qualitative judgments of commerce and industry.

In other words, a federal agency will begin supplanting the marketplace as the authority which answers such questions as how big is too big and how small is too small in specific business situations.

•

The fact that there were no immediate screams of anguish from right-wing MPs or the business community against an abhorrent departure from their ideology, shows how deep the new philosophy's roots are—if you look for them.

Canada now seems to be following a course parallel to the Japanese evolution which never did have private enterprise without vestige of government involvement as occurred in the west.

There the governing circles always had a big say in all economic development precisely on the grounds of national and social purpose.

In addition, they have used the consensus technique rather than relying solely on personal profit to make difficult managerial dicisions and gain general acceptance for them.

What else were the deliberately-staged public debates in the tax reform and unemployment insurance white papers but a Canadian version of the consensus technique?

The significance of this process is not that opposition from traditional quarters was able to reduce the impact of government proposals but that those traditional quarters grew to accept fundamental changes during the debates.

Thus the Conservatives and business community claimed victory because the capital gains proposed tax was cut from an effective 50 per cent to 25 per cent rate — when it's obvious the greater significance is that they accepted innovation of a capital gains tax.

Who remembers or cares now what the first income tax rate was — it's the precedent that changed our whole society, not the degree.

Just as important was the Indian white paper's rejection before implementation. It showed the "consensus" was missing that would have permitted successful application of the government's proposals and the nation may well have avoided a catastrophe thereby.

The consensus technique also is being expanded through introduction of draft bills — the competition act bill is only one of half a dozen put up for public debate before the lawmakers begin their formal scrutiny in September.

But even more state involvement in social purpose than meddling with boards of directors is under way.

The Opportunities for Youth program, for instance, is consciously intended to stimulate young persons, not into mere production for its own sake but to develop "meaningful" occupation of their time.

•

However, shakily the program has begun, the importance lies in this innovation of government concern with the quality of citizen endeavors — once again going far beyond the limits of merely playing policeman to ensure that one citizen's activity doesn't harm another.

Portions of society are screaming outrage in this case, mainly coming from the fundamentalists of the traditional lifestyle.

But their emotional protest is pathetic because in all too many cases it comes from the very parents who have failed to raise their children as rugged self-reliant individuals — suitably standardized and sanitized by the old precepts of personal profit.

Screaming at the government's clumsy rescue attempts will not drown out the clammering mea culpas.

It only spurs the government to overcome its clumsiness and master the difficulties — again through a system rather than an ideological approach.

LEWIS
. . . new opposition?

STANFIELD
. . . Tories a dodo

A free society always gets the government it deserves and wants and the Trudeau government is in power because Canadian society wants a pragmatic instead of a partisan approach to its problems.

•

And that's why the upper-case Conservatives in most parts of the country are beginning to look remarkably like the dodo birds of yesteryear while the NDP flock grows.

For instance, traditional partisan positions have trapped the Conservatives into virtually scorning the whole Quebec problem while the NDP, which has never had a foothold in Quebec, agonizes over the constitutional situation ad infinitum.

The result is that the Tories appear indifferent to a national concern, leaving it to the NDP to appear to care deeply not only about Quebec but Canada's future. No wonder the voters are turning off Toryism.

•

Still, the Conservative problem is not one of tactics but of principles. Its relevance is being steadily undermined by the same public shift of basic philosophy which drives the Liberal government into its experiments.

Prime Minister Trudeau's recent speech, questioning whether the gross national product measurement was the best one was surprising enough.

It would have been incredible from the lips of a Tory, even as the whispered echo of an increasingly vehement public demand.

More than one Grit cabinet minister here is brooding about the possibility of more stunning NDP electoral victories in the foreseeable future and there's no mistaking the changing tone of the cabinet in regarding the NDP as the credible alternative choice.

In consequence, an old saw is being turned around here as the Liberals redefine themselves as New Democrats in a hurry.

TALKING OF SUBSIDIES

Why Underground Press?

TORONTO STAR
An Editorial

"Our constituency is young people. What we have to worry about is our credibility with them if we don't fund Guerilla."

That was the explanation given by an official of the federal government's Opportunities for Youth program for the decision to make a $15,000 grant to the Toronto "underground" newspaper Guerilla (its own spelling). It is an explanation which may not satisfy puzzled taxpayers.

What is an underground paper? The name calls up memories of World War II, of secret newspapers published by patriots in occupied Europe, under the nose of the Gestapo and at the constant risk of their lives.

But Canadian underground papers don't really belong to this heroic tradition, though they like to pretend they do. They are published quite openly and their publishers and writers risk little.

But they are revolutionary in the sense that they attack the accepted values and traditions of Canadian society — work, family, authority, self-control and all the rest.

They are the champions of what they like to call the "youth culture" or the "alternative culture." They rarely spell it out, but it seems to be a more modern version of the Big Rock Candy Mountain in which nobody works, nobody takes any responsibility and the fumes of marijuana and the strains of rock music rise peacefully everywhere.

★ ★ ★

Guerilla is a comparatively presentable specimen of its class. It doesn't go in for incitements to violence; it offers much earnest advice about health foods and how to avoid bad trips on drugs; and it uses better English and fewer four-letter words than some of its competitors.

But it yields to none of them in its disaffection toward Canadian society as it now exists. Its pages are quite a mixture — hints on how to outwit the "pigs" (police to you); hopeful reports on guerrilla wars and rebellions in various parts of the world; plugs for assorted causes from the Quebec separatists to Gay (homosexual) Liberation; and from time to time quotations from the thoughts of Chairman Mao.

How far the influence of the publication extends it is impossible to say with any certainty, but we doubt if it goes much beyond a small circle of young people in Toronto.

The idea that the government will lose "credibility" with the great mass of young Canadians if it fails to help this publication seems ludicrous.

It is, of course, a typical example of the inane neo-liberal notion that young middle-class radicals must be pampered and bribed lest they become really nasty.

The real objection to the grant is one of principle, which would apply just as much (perhaps even more) if the paper preached the straight Liberal gospel instead of the counter-culture.

★ ★ ★

Guerilla has a perfect right to express its views; we would strongly oppose any attempt to suppress it. But why shouldn't be subsidized at the expense of the taxpayers? The ordinary Canadian has reason to feel that he is being taken for a ride in this matter.

The above-ground press has to pay its own way. Why shouldn't the so-called underground press do likewise?

Bomb Threats Ground Both Air Canada Jumbos

MILWAUKEE (CP) — Air Canada had its problems Tuesday with a pair of bomb scares involving both its Boeing 747 jumbo jets. One of the $23 million planes was diverted here, the other landed in Montreal.

The search for a bomb on the 747 that landed here on a flight from Toronto to Vancouver was hampered by lack of equipment necessary to unload the plane's cargo containers.

The plane carrying 232 passengers and 18 crew members was on its way to Vancouver when the pilot learned of the bomb threat while over Traverse City, Mich.

The craft was sent to Milwaukee's Mitchell Field because it was the nearest airport that could handle a 747, officials said. Only one other jumbo has landed in Milwaukee when violent weather prevented it from landing at Chicago's O'Hare International Airport.

Another plane, a DC-8, took off from Toronto to bail out the stranded passengers.

DIVERTED TO SHANNON

Air Canada officials reported another 747 out of Paris, bearing the same flight number, 871, was forced to land at Shannon, Ireland, earlier Tuesday because of another bomb scare.

An airline spokesman said the Paris - Montreal - Toronto flight carrying 159 passengers arrived in Montreal at 9:36 p.m. EDT. It was originally to have arrived at 4:15 p.m., but was delayed five hours at Shannon while a search was conducted. No bomb was found.

Because of the earlier delay, the Toronto leg of the flight was cancelled, the Toronto-bound passengers being delayed on a flight leaving Montreal at 11:25 p.m.

An unidentified male caller phoned the Air Canada reservations desk in Toronto and warned that a bomb would explode on the 747 flying to Vancouver, an airline official said. The Toronto reservations desk also had received a call warning of a bomb aboard the other Air Canada plane out of Paris, the spokesman said.

Milwaukee police, airport deputies and sheriff's firemen searched the plane after it landed in Milwaukee.

FBI officials were standing by, but an official of the agency said it had no jurisdiction because the bomb scare had been received in Canada and no device had exploded.

Professors' Origin Doesn't Really Matter

BY THE CANADIAN INSTITUTE OF PUBLIC OPINION

While over a third of the Canadian public think that there are too many American professors teaching in Canadian universities, weight of opinion is that it doesn't really matter, with almost half giving this as their decision.

Belief that scholarship is more important in this regard than citizenship is most widespread among the university-trained, and among young people. Six in 10 of those with higher educational levels claim that it doesn't matter, compared to about four in 10 among those with public schooling only. Similarly a majority of those under 30 agree it is of no great concern, while among citizens over 50, the proportion drops to four in 10. This level rises to 61 per cent among those in their thirties.

With a good deal of controversy arising on the situation across the country, Gallup interviewers set out to establish what the average man and woman thinks about the proportion of Americans in our universities.

The question:

"From what you have heard or read, do you think there are too many American professors teaching at Canadian universities, or do you think citizenship doesn't matter as long as they are good professors?"

The Canadian response, analyzed below, shows that among younger Canadians, concern over the number of U.S. professors here is much less than among older people, and that the same situation is true among those who have been to university.

Garage Holds Secret Of 'Better Mileage'

BOWMANVILLE, Ont. (CP) — Art Stackaruk has a little secret locked in his garage which he says will double an automobile's gasoline mileage, reduce auto emissions by 80 per cent, ensure longer engine life—and earn him $2.5 million.

About all he will say about his secret is that it involves modifications to an automobile's ignition system, engine and carburetor.

He has modified a 1965 Ford Fairlane, with six cylinders and has taken elaborate security precautions with the vehicle.

It is locked in the garage in this community eight miles east of Oshawa and is wired so whenever the hood is raised, the horn will sound.

He is afraid to drive the car because "someone is apt to steal it from me," and he is scared to patent his invention "because that would let out my secret."

The two major North American car manufacturers whom he talked to about purchasing the idea are not interested unless it is patented or they are allowed to examine the modifications before making a commitment, he says.

Mr. Stackaruk believes his $2.5 million is going to come from the sale of books within the next month, for $100 each, outlining the modifications.

He would not send out any books until enough money has been collected. The money would be kept in a trust fund until he realized enough to make it worthwhile to release the information. If enough cash was not received, he would return the money, he says.

"If I don't sell it, nothing is lost and nothing is gained. At least I've got the peace of mind of knowing it's possible and I've done it. This isn't my livelihood, just my hobby."

The 45-year-old automobile repairman and used-car dealer says his method involves modification to the ignition system to allow two spark plug firings per ignition, one at 120 pounds per square inch pressure and a second at 15 per square inch.

There also are carburetor and motor changes, including a fine hole drilled in the carburetor—but everything would cost under $20 to do, he says.

He says his modified car has run between 41 and 51.7 miles on one gallon of gasoline.

U.S. Immigration To Canada Rising

By The Associated Press

Is another American immigration wave into Canada building up? Some Canadian officials fear so and believe that in the long run it might become more a matter of concern than American control of areas of the Canadian economy.

The official Canadian government policy is to welcome Americans and to play down any concern about rising numbers.

But some Canadian authorities are inclined to worry just the same.

Official figures made public recently show that 4,808 Americans entered Canada as landed immigrants in the first three months of 1971, as opposed to 4,194 in the first quarter of 1970.

By comparison, immigrants from Britian numbered 4,269 in the first three months this year, down from the 6,190 in the first quarter of 1970.

The number of immigrants from the United States has been increasing steadily from 14,148 in 1966 to 16,115 in 1967, to 17,075 in 1968 to 22,785 in 1969 to 24,424 in 1970.

Last year, in fact, the United States replaced Italy as the source of the second largest number of immigrants. Britian was still in first place, but only by a hairline margin.

But U.S. immigration figures are still small compared to some of the waves of the past.

In 1912, when the prairies were being settled, a total of 120,095 Americans came to Canada to live. In the decade from 1911 to 1920 the figure was 625,949.

In 1915, there were reported to be nearly one million U.S. immigrants living on the Canadian prairies.

During the American Civil War, about 15,000 army deserters, known as "skedaddlers," crossed into Canada. Upon amnesty granted in 1865, most of them returned home, leaving few traces, except for such place names as "Skedaddle Ridge" near Mapleton, in New Brunswick.

There are now at least 300 U.S. military deserters in Canada, but the number of American draft evaders is not known.

'TRADING VALUE' CITED

Arctic Gas 'Substantial'

By GARRY FAIRBARN

OTTAWA (CP) — Substantial gas fields exist in Canada's Arctic and should be included in any estimate of Canadian gas supplies, a Dome Petroleum Ltd. witness told the National Energy Board today.

Exploration Manager John Andriuk said, however, that he could not provide a specific estimate of the Arctic supplies.

Dome Petroleum has an exploration permit covering 190,000 acres of King Christian Island and is planning a four-well drilling program there, he said.

J. W. S. McOuat, counsel for Union Gas Co. of Canada, asked why exploration companies are still holding Arctic information in confidence.

Mr. Andriuk said there is "a certain trading value" in the information.

The National Energy Board is holding the hearings to determine whether Canada can spare 2.7 trillion cubic feet of gas for export to the United States.

ASKS WESTERN HEARINGS

W. E. Richards, representing Dome Petroleum, asked the board to consider alternating future hearings between Eastern and Western Canada to enable greater participation by gas producers.

Neil J. Stewart, chairman of the hearing, said the board had seriously considered holding the present hearing in Calgary but for various reasons, including the TransCanada PipeLines Ltd. application to increase rates, the hearing had to be held in Ottawa.

"This is very much in the board's mind, Mr. Richards, and I think you can look forward with either terror or favor to having hearings held in Calgary."

Mr. Andriuk also said that the cost per unit of Arctic gas would not be significantly different than that of gas from the Alberta foothills, because of the large volumes of gas expected to be found in the Arctic.

Donald M. Wolcott, vice-president of Dome Petroleum, said his company's financing of Arctic exploration would be greatly assisted if the energy board encourages gas exports.

"How much do you know about the cost of moving gas out of the Canadian Arctic," asked James Cameron representative of TransCanada PipeLines.

"I have some estimates which I feel are not good enough to be put before this board," Mr. Wolcott answered.

In other testimony, Ross White of Calgary, gas sales representative for Amoco Canada Petroleum Co., said his firm has marketable gas reserves totalling 5,944 billion cubic feet in four major fields: East Cross, Martin Hills, Beaver River and Pointed Mountain.

Arrest Warrant Out In Double Murder

Police have issued a warrant for the arrest of Michel Joly, 24, in connection with the slaying last weekend of two young girls who were out blueberry-picking.

Meanwhile, in the Laurentian community of St. Sauveur north of Montreal, some 60 volunteers joined police and tracking dogs in a search for two teen-age girls who disappeared Tuesday night from their summer camp.

Police helicopters were also being used in the search for Sandy Fox, 13, and Cathy Harris, 14, placed in the camp by a welfare agency.

Joly and another unidentified man are wanted in connection with the shooting deaths of Carole Marchand, 13, and Chantal Cote, 12. Their bodies were found in a wooded area four miles north of their homes in Cap de la Madeleine, 90 miles northeast of Montreal.

Both had been shot in the head, and an autopsy showed that the older girl had been sexually assaulted before being killed.

ALMOST GOT HIM

Sgt. Marcel Ste. Marie, acting director of the Quebec Provincial Police homicide squad, said his men had "just missed" arresting Joly Tuesday night, raiding a Montreal apartment building an hour after Joly left it.

The suspect is considered dangerous and may be armed.

A handprint was found on the trunk of the stolen car the slain girls were seen entering.

QPP officers staged a series of simultanious raids Tuesday on unoccupied summer cottages in Cap de la Madeleine and homes in Montreal.

A raid in an automobile scrap yard at Ste. Marthe provided police with the information that Joly had been seen in a Cap de la Madeleine hotel Sunday night and had left for Montreal Monday.

FBI Tough On China

WASHINGTON (AP) — J. Edgar Hoover has told Congress the FBI expects to step up its effort to combat Chinese "intelligence-gathering and revolution-inspiring activities" in the United States.

The FBI director said Peking considers the United States "its chief enemy."

Hoover made the statement to a closed Senate hearing three weeks before President Nixon announced plans to go to the People's Republic of China as a step toward normalization of relations.

The director's statement was released Monday as the Senate acted on a bill that includes FBI appropriations.

SAFEWAY CHALLENGES POP CAN CHARGES

NANAIMO (CP) — The first company charged with refusing to comply with British Columbia's new anti-litter laws pleaded not guilty in provincial court Tuesday.

Canada Safeway Ltd. is charged with refusing to refund two cents on each empty pop can taken to the store on June 29.

A former Nanaimo alderman, John Hancock, who pressed charges, claimed the company must pay for the empty cans despite having a sign posted which authorizes an agent to handle Safeway's refund payments. Judge Stanley Wardill set Aug. 23 as trial date.

S. Vietnam Launches Cambodia Attack

SAIGON (AP) — With support from United States helicopter gunships and B-52 bombers, 10,000 South Vietnamese troops launched a new operation in eastern Cambodia today designed to prevent the North Vietnamese from disrupting elections in South Vietnam next month.

The force encountered no immediate resistance. B-52 bombing raids preceded the drive.

The commander of the operation, Lt.-Gen. Nguyen Van Minh, said he hopes to smash the North Vietnamese 7th Division, numbering about 4,000 men, which has long operated across the border from South Vietnam's Tay Ninh province.

"Our mission is to cut off North Vietnamese infiltration into South Vietnam, to prevent the enemy from sabotaging the elections," said Minh.

SENT REINFORCEMENTS

The legislative elections are scheduled Aug. 29 and the presidential election Oct. 3.

Minh said his forces are operating about 20 miles inside Cambodia and 10 miles north of Highway 7.

Minh said the 10,000 troops involved in the operation were already in position at bases inside Cambodia, but he sent in a 200-vehicle armored column to reinforce them.

Cheque Jigsaw

BOISE, Idaho (AP) — Two dozen young bank employees have been holed up in a well-guarded room for a week, painstakingly piecing together some $800,000 worth of cheques that were inadvertently shredded for trash.

Some of the cheques have been photographed and all of them have been recorded, a bank spokesman said Monday. This has aided in the reconstruction of nearly $300,000 worth of cheques.

Earlier this month a janitor at the home office of the First Security Bank picked up what he thought was a bundle of trash, and routinely ran it through the wastepaper shredder.

$1 Land Offer Recommended

Saanich lands committee recommended Tuesday night acceptance of a private offer of about 15,000 square feet of land for a nominal $1.

The land is on the south side of an Aske Homes and Construction subdivision off Kenneth Street and would be included in properties being assembled as part of the open space-park plan for Swan Lake Creek, which flows from Swan Lake to Colquitz Creek.

E and N Rail Told to Pay $22,000 Tax

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia Appeals Court has upheld a B.C. Supreme Court decision ordering the Esquimalt and Nanaimo Railway to pay taxes of $22,000 on land it sold to MacMillan Bloedel Ltd. in 1964.

Under the Esquimalt and Nanaimo Land Belt Tax Act, all lands alienated from the E and N, a subsidiary of CP Rail, are subject to a 25 per cent land tax to be paid by the purchaser.

In this case, however, a technical irregularity in the sale of 135,000 acres of land to MacMillan Bloedel left E and N still holding the title to two parcels of the land.

The situation was corrected in 1968, but not before the railway received the $22,000 tax notice for the interim.

Lilly

A special meeting of Eli Lilly and Co. stockholders, has been called for Sept. 28 to a vote on a proposed stock split.

The pharmaceutical manufacturer said sales during the first six months of 1971 totalled a record $376 million.

The 2-for-1 stock split would increase the authorized shares of common stock from 40 million shares at a par value of $1.25 to 80 million at par 62½ cents. At present, 34,165,598 shares are issued.

Net income during the first six months of this year was $52 million, down $800,000 from the same period last year.

Delta

Delta Hotels Ltd. had earnings for the six months ended June 30 of $111,738 or 20 cents a share, compared with $45,070 for the same period in 1970.

Per-share earnings for the first half of 1970 are not available because the company was reorganized.

Delta president William Pattison said earnings of 60 cents a share are projected for all of 1971. Delta is negotiating to acquire hotel locations in the interior of B.C. and Alberta.

Imperial

Imperial Oil Ltd. earnings for the first six months of 1971 are estimated at $64 million, or 50 cents a share, compared with $45 million (35 cents) for the first half of 1970.

The company attributed the profit increase to many factors, including crude oil exports, petroleum product sales, and fertilizer exports as well as price improvements and operating efficiency.

Chairman W. O. Twaits said shareholders should bear in mind that product prices had not kept pace with inflationary cost pressures in 1970 and that break-in costs for new manufacturing units had helped depress profits in the first half of last year.

Chrysler

Chrysler Corp. reports second-quarter profits of $31.4 million (63 cents a share) compared with $10.1 million (21 cents) in the same quarter of last year.

The second-quarter profits raised Chrysler's net for the first six months of 1971 to $42.2 million, compared with a net loss of $17.3 million in the first half of 1970.

Chrysler said its second-quarter sales totalled a record $2.1 billion, up 9 per cent over $1.9 billion last year.

Goodyear

Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co. of Canada Ltd. reports its net profit for the first six months of the current year increased more than fourfold to $2.85 million of $10.71 a common share, compared with $671,000, ($2.21) in the same period last year.

Sales for the first half of 1971 represented only a slight increase to $88.3 million from $87.53 million in 1970.

Western

Western Realty Projects Ltd. had net earnings for the six months ended June 30 of $1.2 million (18.7 cents a share) compared with $704,572 (11 cents) for the 1970 period.

Frontier

A copper prospect 60 miles southwest of Houston, in the Tahtsa Lake area, will be explored for possible development by the Swedish firm Granges Exploration AB, subsidiary of the mining-metals company Granges Aktiebolag.

Property is owned by Frontier Explorations Ltd. which has optioned it for up to five years in exchange for a maximum $1.6 million in exploration outlays, worth 80.84 per cent interest in the claims.

Under production, Granges will be repaid out of 80 per cent of the profits. Both interests will be involved in initial exploration management, with Granges assuming full control later.

Kaiser Loss $13.1 Million

VANCOUVER — Kaiser Resources Ltd. had a consolidated net operating loss of $13.1 million for the first six months of 1971, or $1.31 per common share on sales of $29 million, it was announced today by president C. L. Emerson.

"The first half financial results should not be taken as representative of future prospects," Emerson said, "since price increases have been agreed to by our Japanese customers and since significant improvements in mining practices and coal preparation plant operations have been effected.

"Cost performance at our Sparwood mine has shown marked improvement reflecting extra effort by our employees and increased efficiency in operation of all facilities. All the signs are now pointing in the right direction, and we believe that Kaiser Resources has turned the corner."

The new agreement with the Japanese steel industry contemplates, over the 15-month period, an average interim price increase equivalent to $2.50 (Canadian) per long ton and special cost assistance in the form of an average special price increase of $1.85 (U.S.) per long ton for the 15-month period.

"This recent action by our Japanese customers is a tremendous vote of confidence in our entire operations," Emerson said. "I believe it expresses their faith in our ability to operate the mine on a competitive and productive basis, and is a reaffirmation of the importance the Japanese place on Kaiser Resources as a major coal supplier to their steel industry."

Firm Considers Expanding West

Extension of its dry cleaning chain from Ontario to the West is being considered by Koffler Stores Ltd., which Tuesday landed in Saanich with Vancouver Island's first Shopper's Drug Mart.

Opening of the former Cunningham Drug store in Town and Country shopping centre by acting mayor Ald. Leslie Passmore marked the 40th conversion of a Cunningham operation to the Shopper's banner since February, when Koffler Stores merged with the B.C.-Alberta company.

Koffler executive vice-president Jack Gwartz, of Toronto, said following the opening, the extension of its Embassy dry cleaning organization is being explored.

It is desirable, he said, for the cleaning and drug stores to co-exist in shopping centres, but so far it had been difficult to enter the dry cleaning industry in western Canada.

12 CONVERSIONS

He said there are 12 Vancouver Island stores due for conversion to Shopper's Drug Marts by the fall, three of which — in downtown Victoria, Sidney and Nanaimo — are in progress.

Passmore, snipping a strip of surgical gauze, welcomed Kofflers to Saanich and hoped the "tradition of fair, honest service in Cunningham's operation would continue and improve under the Koffler banner."

Shopper's Drug Mart is characterizedby a black and white decor, wide aisles in self-serve layout, bright lighting and discount prices.

Store executive Erling P. H. Bjarnason of Vancouver noted a growing public consciousness of pricing and that by cutting frills, increasing volume and reducing prices, Shopper's can provide service to customers and satisfaction to shareholders.

Welfare Service Boost, Fraud Probe in Duncan

By DONNA CLEMENTS

DUNCAN — A review of all rehabilitation and social improvement cases in the Cowichan Valley will begin within two weeks.

Supervisor Iva Woodward said Tuesday that the purpose of the review, which is part of a program being carried out all over British Columbia, is two-fold.

"Additional people have been hired by the department to go out through the province to see where we are not giving enough service and to detect and prosecute any fraudulent cases.

"I have been promised that one or two will come to this area within the next couple of weeks," she said.

She said that concern about increases in welfare costs are shared fully by the department.

She said the reviewers, who are paid by Ottawa and the province, will be here about three months to carry out the scheme.

"These people will be in touch with people in the grass roots area and refer back to us cases that need more service. If any evidence of fraud is found the case will be referred to the RCMP for investigation and prosecution."

Miss Woodward said that with the adverse publicity about the department and people on welfare "it seems to me that these people are all suspect. I want to lift the cloud from over their heads once and for all."

Review to 'Lift the Cloud' From Department and Poor

Miss Woodward admits there are problems. The service has been short a worker and has had so many other irons in the fire "we have been unable to concentrate on the situation."

At the end of the review she hopes the whole caseload under her jurisdiction, which is from Cassidy airport to the Malahat and including the Cowichan Lake area, will have been investigated and "will be known inside-out."

"This program is really helpful for new supervisors like me and a staff that is changing constantly," she said.

Miss Woodward, who has been a social worker in this area for the past 25 years, was appointed local supervisor in April.

Her staff, which consists of five full-time and one half-time social workers, will soon be brought up to full complement with an additional worker.

Mayor Jim Quaife, who this week expressed concern over Duncan being the second highest-paying municipality per capita in British Columbia in welfare, said he is "elated" that the review is to be carried out.

"I am very happy to know that somebody is going to try to find outwhat in the Sam Hill is going on. I am at a loss to explain the high costs," he said.

One cause could be that there are just no full-time jobs for unskilled people in this area.

Norm Bomford, officer in charge at Canada Manpower in Duncan, said that the only jobs for unskilled people are casual such as haymaking and berry picking. "There is a fairly steady demand for skilled people. We have more competition for a haymaking job than for a plumbing job."

Bomford said there are always more jobs for women in this area but currently "they are jobs that no one wants such as waitressing in poor establishments or live-in housekeeping jobs that don't pay enough and have no future."

Exchange Students Keep Pouring In

Sixty-three teen-agers from New Brunswick and Ontario arrived in Victoria today at the midway point in the federal government's Young Voyageur student exchange program.

Accompanied by an equal number of young hosts and six adult escorts, the Grade 11 students will be billetted in local homes, tour the city and be received by the city and provincial government.

A total of 650 students from across the country will visit Victoria before the summer program ends in the middle of August.

B.C. co-ordinator is Philip Kitley, 2171 Wenman, of the department of education.

Kitley points out that the program was started in 1964 with a view to building to an enthusiastic climax in centennial year 1967, but was found so popular that it has continued and is growing in size yearly.

"It teaches the students what it means to be Canadian citizens," Kitley said. "We think its the best way to break down separatism, either in Quebec of here in British Columbia."

He said one student told him he had learned more French in one week in Quebec than he had picked up in three years of study.

"What he really meant was that the visit to Quebec had given the language meaning for him," Kitley said.

The trips are not offered as a reward for high marks, but are based on which students committees at the local level think would best benefit from the experience. Grade 11 students are chosen so they will have at least one more year in high school to "spread the word" when they get back home.

Making the cross-country exchange voyages this summer will be 5,000 students from Victoria to Newfoundland. They travel in DC-9 jets chartered by the federal secretary of state department.

Next to visit this area will be 21 Ottawa teen-agers who will spend 10 days based in Sooke.

A group of Quebec students has been in the Cowichan Valley the past week.

Pollution Hearing

COBBLE HILL — The B.C. Pollution Control Board will hold a public hearing Thursday here on an application from Starboard Investments Ltd. of Victoria to discharge treated effluent into Cowichan Bay.

The hearing will be at Bench Elementary at 9:30 a.m.

Incentives Program Popular

DUNCAN — The B.C. welfare incentive program is being used more and more and is helping people hold their heads up, according to Iva Woodward, the Duncan social improvement supervisor.

Although it took a while for the program to get of off the ground, Miss Woodward said it is becoming more popular.

"It will be used to an even greater extent as it becomes accepted by the community and non-profit organizations.

"I think it is a tremendous program," she said. "People on it feel they are making a contribution. They begin to feel that people respect them for what they are and forget about their financial spot."

The program, which was introduced into the province in 1969 and was first used in the Cowichan Valley in early 1970, is for anyone on social assistance. Applicants are placed with a non-profit organization to work about 30 hours a month to enable them to earn an additional $58 above their monthly cheque.

INCENTIVES

"The purpose of this is to give these people the incentive for self help and for them to gain self-confidence," explained Miss Woodward. "This is particularly valuable for mothers who are cooped up with their children all the time."

So far about 40 local people have participated in the program.

They have been hired generally within the government offices, school districts as volunteer aides, and the sheltered workshop.

The $50 grant is paid fully by the province and is reviewed every six months.

Miss Woodward said the next step, ideally for these people would be going out into the work force because usually by then they are prepared psychologically and socially to get a job and to want it."

Trustees Strengthen Bargaining

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia school trustees association has taken over collective bargaining with non-teaching employees in 17 school districts in the Kootenays, the Okanagan, and on Vancouver Island.

Robert Bowman, BCSTA Director of employee relations, said Monday the association hopes to expand to cover school districts on the north coast and in the northern interior.

He said the school districts which have signed up are too small to bargain effectively on their own and need greater uniformity in their labor contracts.

Man's Body Washed Up

TOFINO (CP) — The body of Frederick Gunn, 32, of Sidney, was found Tuesday washed up on the beach at Indian Bay near this Vancouver Island community, Tofino RCMP said Tuesday night.

Gunn was reported missing after a canoeing accident June 24 on the Kennedy River in which two companions made it safely to shore.

Poor Wellington Rained Out Again

By JAMES NELSON

OTTAWA (CP) — It seems that one of the Duke of Wellington's victories over French forces under Napoleon just isn't to be commemorated on the Quebec side of the Ottawa River these days, even if only in music.

Twice last summer, the CBC scheduled open-air performances of Ludwig van Beethoven's work, Wellington's Victory, complete with full symphony orchestra, stereophonic field cannon, and augmented drums and bugles. Twice the performances were cancelled because of rain.

The work was rescheduled for this summer's CBC festival, again at Camp Fortune, a ski resort in the Gatineau Hills near Kingsmere, Que., where there is a natural amphitheatre and plenty of room for cannon.

MUSICIAN of many talents, Les Thimmig plays the saxaphone, composes, teaches and is a highly-skilled ensemble performer. But tonight at MacLaurin auditorium he will don still another coat — with a difference. As a clarinetist he will perform the Mozart Clarinet Concerto with the Festival Chamber Orchestra in its last but one appearance. The switch is that he will play it on the basset horn, which is the forerunner of the modern clarinet and the instrument for which Mozart wrote the concerto. This particular basset horn, incidentally, is a modern reproduction of the woodwind especially loaned by Yale University. George Corwin will conduct the performance which begins at 8 p.m.

Monday night, the performance was rained out again.

Tuesday, conductor Francoys Bernier finally got to tap his baton, and the drums and trumpets sounded, first on his right, far off in the trees, then on his left. The orchestra was bathed alternately in red and blue lights, representing the approaching armies.

The work, sometimes called Beethoven's battle symphony, was written in 1813 to commemorate Wellington's victory at Vitoria, Spain, in the Peninsular War.

But it was not to be a victory over the elements for Maestro Bernier and the CBC summer festival orchestra—in fact, mostly members of the National Arts Centre with added personnel.

SHOT FIRED, RAIN FALLS

The artillery of The Bytown Gunners, Ottawa's reserve army regiment, echoed through the hills. And almost with the first shot, the rain started.

Robert Oades, trumpeter and personnel manager for the NAC orchestra, signalled the conductor with his finger across his throat, the sign to "cut, cut."

Some orchestra members broke ranks and ran for cover. Others tried to hide their instruments under sweaters and suit coats.

Finally, Mr. Bernier brought the production to a halt.

Walter Prystawski, NAC orchestra concertmaster, said afterwards there were far too many valuable instruments to risk irreperable damage in the rain.

Earlier in the program, Mr. Prystawski, Toronto-born violinist who was for 10 years concertmaster of the Lucerne Festival Strings and the Basle Symphony Orchestra in Switzerland, gave a rhapsodic performance of Ralph Vaughan Williams' The Lark Ascending.

Mr. Bernier also conducted Michel Richard Dlalande's Symphonie des Soupers du Roi, composed for the court of France's King Louis XIV, and Franz Joseph Haydn's D Major Symphony, The Hunt.

Horse Show Draws 100

More than 100 entries, mostly from the lower mainland and U.S., are expected at the fourth annual show of the Vancouver Island Quarter Horse Association next weekend.

A total of 46 events will be run off Saturday and Sunday at the Saanichton fair grounds. Judge is Tommie Barr of Milden, Sask.

Halter classes get under way at 9 a.m. Saturday.

A highlight each day is expected to be the cutting horse competition, where riders are tested on skill and speed separating a cow from the herd.

THIEF, VICTIM FRIENDS AGAIN

WINCHESTER, England (CP) — Pub landlord Reg Bayley and ex-convict Bill Purkiss are friends again — even though Bill robbed Reg's pub at gun point and was jailed for three years. But while inside, he wrote and apologized to the landlord and sent him an oil painting of the pub. So Reg invited Bill over for a "coming-out party" on the day of his release.

WHY THAT'S NO LADY, SHE'S A GOALKEEPER!

BRIGHTON, England (UPI) — When the referee ordered a kick against her side, Eileen Bourne, 20-year-old goalkeeper for the Brighton Post Office soccer team became annoyed.

"The ball didn't go over the bloody line, ref!" she yelled.

And that is how she became the first woman player in the Sussex league to be sent off the field for swearing.

Said Charles Adams, the referee: "Nobody swears at me, whether it's a man or woman."

VANCOUVER (CP) — Coquitlam Adanacs survived a near-riot in the first period Tuesday night to defeat Vancouver Burrards, 13-11 in a Western Lacrosse Association game before 1,789 fans, including WLA commissioner Tom English.

The trouble started at 15:50 of the opening session when Dunc Wilson of the Burrards charged out of the penalty box and deeked Wayne Bellwood of the Adanacs with a sharp right to the head.

Wilson had been sent to the penalty box after taking a cross-check to the neck from Bellwood and when the Coquitlam player walked by with his hands raised in triumph, the Burrards' scrapper exploded.

Both benches emptied and when order was finally restored, the teams were sent to their dressing rooms to cool off.

Wilson and Bellwood were thrown out of the game, Wilson getting two majors and a match misconduct. Bellwood, in addition to his three majors and a game misconduct, was taken to hospital in New Westminster for an examination.

Wilson was fined $10 six weeks ago when he was the central figure in a brawl between the same two teams. He had planned to play only one more game before getting ready for the National Hockey League season with Vancouver Canucks.

Kerry Gallagher was the key to Coquitlam's victory, scoring twice while his team was shorthanded, and assisting on two other goals.

Minor Ball Teams Move Into Playoffs

Bantam boys and girls' teams from the Colwood and District Softball League enter provincial playoffs Saturday and Sunday after capturing Vancouver Island crowns last weekend.

Esquimalt Blues will play host to the girls' tourney after defeating Nanaimo in a best-of-three contest 19-2 and 23-11 at the "Hub City." Host Sooke won the Island boys' crown with 9-2 and 25-1 victories over Campbell River and will enter the provincial tourney in Abbotsford.

In other minor softball action last weekend, Kamloops emerged with the B.C. midget boys' crown at View Royal by defeating the host squad 6-2 in the final game of the double-loss elimination playoff.

Clearbrooke was eliminated from the tourney early.

Cordova Bay won the district juvenile girls' title in a double-loss competition against Victoria, Esquimalt, View Royal and Hampton Park. The new champions now play host to the Island playoff this weekend.

Sooke won the district juvenile boys' crown in a similar playoff at Esquimalt against Esquimalt and View Royal. Sooke now enters the Island playdowns in Nanaimo this weekend.

Disagreement Forces Rauch To Leave Bills

NIAGARA FALLS, N.Y. (AP) — John Rauch resigned unexpectedly Tuesday as head coach of Buffalo Bills of the National Football League.

Rauch resigned after a meeting with Ralph C. Wilson Jr., owner of the team, at the Bills' training camp here. Wilson said he met with Rauch to tell the coach he was about to issue statements defending two former Bills players whom Rauch had criticized in a recent television program.

The players are Ron McDole and Paul Maguire.

"He told me if I did so, I would have to get myself a new head coach," Wilson. "I regret John's decision as I respect his football knowledge and his willingness the last two years to try and build with young players."

A team spokesman said Harvey Johnson, Bills' player personnel director, was immediately named to succeed Rauch.

Rauch, former Oakland Raider coach who took over the Bills at the start of the 1969 season, said only: "I gave my resignation to Ralph Wilson at 5:30 p.m. It was a difficult decision but one that was best for me and the Bills organization."

About his future, he added: "I would like to stay in professional football."

San Diego Back Puts It on Line

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Running back Dick Post says he's prepared to play out his option this year if the National Football League San Diego Chargers don't make a fair salary offer. And he's prepared to play in Canada, if necessary Post told a news conference that the chargers haven't offered "what a top running back is worth," and said he'll sit out this year "or play out my option if that's what they want." But he refused to go back to training camp until the team negotiates his case.

Roughriders Cut Pair from Squad

REGINA (CP) — Veteran linebacker Ken Reed was cut Tuesday from the Saskatchewan Roughriders' roster along with two-way backfielder Ludwig Daubner.

The cuts left the Riders with 40 players, 21 of whom are Canadians.

BUBBLING OVER . . .

While Los Angeles Dodger teammates were engaged in more serious National Baseball League activity, pitchers Tom House (top right) and Phil Niekro had their own "game" in dugout — a bubble gum blowing contest. When Niekro saw size of House's bubble, he promptly sprang into action to deflate his competition. (AP Wirephoto)

Keenlyside Pulls Away In Junior Golf Tourney

HANEY — Scott Kennlyside of Langley continued his steady pace Tuesday to build a four-stroke lead in the B.C. junior golf championship at Pitt Meadows Golf Club.

The final 18 holes in the 54-hole tournament are scheduled for today.

Keenlyside fired his second consecutive par-72 on Tuesday for a 144 total after the first 36 holes while Brian DeBiasio of Rossland-Trail carded his second straight 74 for a 148 total and the runner-up position.

Former-Victorian Dave Donaldson of Capilano trails DeBiasio by one stroke after slipping to a 77 on Tuesday.

Four Victoria-area golfers, tied at 153, are still within striking distance of one of the four junior B.C. team berths.

Wayne O'Malley of Cedar Hill fired a 79 after Monday's 54; Bob Beauchemin of Gorge Vale carded a 78 after a 75; Bill MacPherson of Victoria had a 76 to go with an opening-round 77 and Jeff Jones of Gorge Vale improved to a 73 from 80.

Keith Burrell of Uplands still in contention with a 154 following a 76 on Tuesday.

Derek Stone led off the fourth inning for Strathcona with another solo homer.

Trevino Prepared This Time

HARRISON, N.Y. (AP) — Lee Trevino comes into the Westchester Golf Classic armed with brimming confidence, an undiminished thirst for victory and seven alarm clocks.

"I was on a late TV program the night before the first round last year, talking about my chances of winning," Trevino recalled today. "And I slept right through my tee time the next day."

He was disqualified from the $250,000 event, richest of the season on the pro golf tour.

"That was the most expensive hour's sleep I ever had," Trevino said. "I slept away a chance to win $50,000.

"Since then people have given me a bunch of alarm clocks, seven of 'em. I'll guarantee you I'll be there on time this year."

Trevino, unprecedented winner of the U.S., Canadian and British Open titles, and PGA champ Jack Nicklaus are co-favorites in the 72-hole event that begins Thursday on the tight little Westchester Country Club course, a 6,700-yard, par-72 layout in suburban New York.

HOWARTH HEADS . . . . . SOCCER LEAGUE

Seven Set to Go

Opening date for competition in a smaller version of the Pacific Coast Soccer was set for Sept. 25 at a league meeting in Vancouver Tuesday night.

The league will consist of seven teams instead of 10 as Eintracht, Columbus and Croatia have definitely decided to pull out in favor of competition in a summer semi-professional league next season.

Each of the squads will play and 18-match schedule with both the Victoria teams — United and neophyte Gorge — playing every Saturday afternoon at Royal Athletic Park.

Other teams returning to the league are Paul's Tailors, UBC Thunderbirds, North Shore, New Westminster and Vancouver Firefighters.

Ken Howarth was elected as the new league president Tuesday while Ron Southern of Victoria was voted in as a director.

Slick-Dealing Cuellar Runs Into Royal Flush

By The Associated Press

Ace dealer Mike Cuellar has always held the upper hand over Kansas City, but Tuesday he ran into a Royal Flush.

Baltimore Orioles' southpaw was blasted out in the third inning, his earliest departure of the year, as the Orioles took a 7-1 drubbing from the Royals.

"I didn't pitch too good, I guess," said the soft-spoken Cuellar, who lost his second straight game after winning 13 of his first 14 American League decisions this year.

Cuellar had a 6-0 record against the expansionist Kansas City club in three years, including a one-hitter earlier this season.

LONG TIME COMING

"We're sure glad to get to him," said Kansas City manager Bob Lemon. "It's been a long time coming."

Elsewhere, California Angels turned back Detroit Tigers 2-0, Oakland Athletics defeated Cleveland Indians 6-3, New York Yankees trimmed Minnesota Twins 6-5, Washington Senators ripped Milwaukee Brewers 5-1 and Boston Red Sox topped Chicago white Sox 5-4.

In the National League, hammerin' Hank Aaron unloaded an explosive home run, a two-run shot with one out in the ninth inning, that broke up a duel between Atlanta's Ron Reed and Dave Roberts of San Diego Padres and powered the Braves to a 3-1 victory.

The round-tripper was No. 618 of Aaron's career and his 26th of the season, five back of major-league leader Willie Stargell of Pittsburgh Pirates.

In other National action, Pittsburgh dumped San Francisco Giants 11-7, Philadelphia Phillies breezed by St. Louis Cardinals 5-1, Cincinnati Reds tripped Los Angeles Dodgers 7-1, Montreal Expos rallied to defeat Houston Astros 4-3 in 10 innings and, in an afternoon game, Chicago Cubs defeated New York Mets 4-2.

SMACKS FOUR

Cookie Rojas cracked four hits for Kansas City, including a double during a four-run rally in the third that chased Cuellar.

Tommie Reynolds made a leaping catch to deprive Detroit of a run in the seventh inning, then slugged a two-run double with two out in the eighth to give surging California its 10th victory in 14 games.

Reynolds raced to the bullpen fence in deep right field and made a leaping, one-handed stab to deprive Dalton Jones of an extra-base hit with a man on base. Then he snapped a scoreless tie with his eighth-inning hit up the alley in left centre.

Unbeaten Chuck Dobson nailed down his ninth victory in Oakland's success over Cleveland. Dobson held the Indians to six hits and didn't walk a batter until two more hits chased him and brought in reliever Rollie Fingers.

Ron Swoboda's bouncer chased in Frank Baker with the winning run to cap a five-run rally for New York in the ninth.

The rally overcame Minnesota's 5-1 lead built on a five-run sixth inning climaxed by Craig Nettles' grand-slam homer.

Dick Bosman drove in three runs with a squeeze bunt and a double and pitched scoreless ball after the first inning to pace Washington's triumph.

Bosman's bunt single scored Elliott Maddox with the second run in a three-run second inning, then doubled to right in the sixth following a walk to Maddox and a two-out, intentional walk to Toby Harrah.

EASY ROMP FOR SAANICH IN RUTH PLAY

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — Three teams emerged undefeated Tuesday after the first day's action in the provincial Babe Ruth baseball tournament.

Coquitlam defeated North Vancouver 3-1, Vancouver Intercommunity dumped Duncan 14-6, and Saanich Evening Optimists swamped Prince George 11-3.

The double-knockout competition continues until Sunday.

Peterson Leads Bell's to Second

Bell's Men's Wear stiffled Century Inn 5-3 at Heywood Avenue Park and William Head Steelers blanked Sooke Merchants 6-0 at William Head in Stuffy McGinnis major Men's Softball League encounters Tuesday evening.

Eric Peterson came to the mound in the bottom of the seventh inning to preserve the victory for Steve Ross and Bell's, who moved into undisputed possession of second place.

Jim Wilson, who had connected for a two-run homer in the second inning, led off the seventh frame for Century with a double. Peterson came on after Ross had issued a base on balls to Don Kilshaw, and then forced losing-pitcher Ted Penston to pop up, made Bob Custance, fly out, and forced Barney Spaven to ground into a game-ending force-out.

Bud Taylor finished off run-scoring for Bell's with a two-out solo homer in the seventh inning.

George Gladu struck out 12 batters and allowed only two hits while hurling Steelers to victory. Ron Witkevich finished off the game for Steelers with a two-run homer in the sixth inning.

ATHLETIC CLINIC . . . . . FILLING VOID

Baby-Sitting Isn't Their Meat

"Dedicated" might be a trite adjective to apply to director Terry Karpiuk and the coaching staff of the Victoria Athletic Coaching Clinic, but it fits.

Since July 5, a total of 130 boys between the ages of eight and 15 have been working on a five-sport program for four hours each weekday at University School.

The coaches, each of whom is paid a "nominal fee" in relation to what they had been (or could be) earning at regular jobs, are Chris Hall (basketball, Ike MacKay (soccer), Daryll Howe (gymnastics), Ross Bruce (swimming) and Karpiuk (floor hockey).

The other director, Rick Couvelier, and the coaches also may share in a percentage of any surplus profits after facility rental and other overhead items are paid.

Karpiuk says none of the coaches will be paid their "full value," but profit was not the idea of the clinic.

"First of all, we felt many minor sports organizations don't give boys a chance to reach their full potential," said Karpiuk.

He also added that both the public and private schools neither have the time nor personnel for an "ideal tutoring system in sports" as there is for any of the academic disciplines.

While the program was being laid out, Karpiuk said that the age limits were set from eight to 15 because that is the time "when boys should receive a well-rounded diet in sports."

Specialization should come later.

"The main thing is to give them the opportunity which is sadly lacking in," said Karpiuk "Until they get the opportunity they can't decide for themselves".

The next session will run from August 2 to 27 and approximately 30 boys are now enrolled

One thing that Karpiuk is not looking for is a babysitting job

He pointed out that "a couple of boys" in the group now were just sent there by their parents "to keep them out of the way during the summer."

This, he feels, is not fair to the boys who enroll to achieve a goal.

PENNY MAY GOLD MEDAL THREAT . . .

There's a Shift of Power on Canada's Pan-Am Team

By BRUCE LEVETT

TORONTO (CP) — Four years ago, at the Pan-American Games in Winnipeg, Canada won 92 medals—12 golds, 37 second-place silvers and 43 bronzes.

Can she do as well in the 1971 Games in Cali, Colombia?

If she does, chances are she'll do it in a different way.

Elaine (Mighty Mouse) Tanner was the terror of the tank in 1967. Today, at 20, she is retired from competition, working as a secretary in Calgary and planning for her wedding.

Harry Jerome was one of the fastest men in the world over 100 metres. He's retired too—working for the federal government in Ottawa.

Jim Day brought his handsome bay Canadian Club up to peak in 1967 and won the individual stadium jumping gold medal in a heart-stopping ride-off. This year he is schooling green jumpers with an eye on next summer's Olympic Games and won't be on the team at Cali.

Diver Beverly Boys, rated one of the best in the Western Hemisphere, has been off form and has to be rated a question mark.

But the picture isn't totally dark.

Canada is sending a strong equestrian team to Cali which, with the withdrawal of such teams as the United States and Mexico over fear of an outbreak of equine disease, must be rated a favorite.

And there will be nobody at the Games who has soared over the high-jump bar higher than Debbie Brill, the back-bending teen-ager from Haney, B.C., who has done better than six feet.

In swimming, steady Angela Coughlan has the ability to win gold in the freestyle events, especially since Debbie Meyer and other top U.S. women are passing up the Games to train for a domestic meet.

Nick Thierry, who coaches the University Settlement Aquatic Club in Toronto and who took the Canadian swimmers to the 1970 Commonwealth Games in Edinburgh, sees a decline in Canadian swimming fortunes, coincident with an upsurge in ability on the part of competitors.

"There are top American coaches working in Peru, Colombia, Venezuela and Mexico, so those teams should be very strong," he says.

Canada won three golds, 13 silvers and 11 bronzes in 1967 in swimming and Thierry believes "it will be virtually impossible to equal our showing because other countries have improved."

"Possibly our best prospects in the men's events are Bill Mahony and Mike Whitaker in the 100 and 200 breaststroke. But they're up against Brian Job, the U.S. world-record holder; Jose Fiolo, the defending champ from Brazil who has had two years of U.S. training, and Felipe Munoz of Mexico, the Olympic champion.

"Byron MacDonald is good enough to win the 100 butterfly, but he's in against Ross Wales, bronze medalist in the 1968 Olympics, and Frank Heckl, the U.S. champ.

"We had a good medal chance with George Smith of Edmonton in the individual medley, but he was badly injured last month in a motorcycle accident and without him, we'll be lucky to make the finals in the 200 and 400.

"We should be contending for silver medals in the men's 400 medley, and the 400 and 800 freestyle. South American countries haven't enough depth to sweep all classes. It would be a disgrace if we didn't take the silver in all three of these events."

As for the women, "Coughlan should be a solid gold favorite in the 100 and 200 freestyle.

"Donna-Marie Gurr is swimming well, but up against the world's top backstroker in Suzie Atwood of the U.S.

"Leslie Cliff swam every event in the Canadian championships and won five out of 12. She was in the top three in most of the others.

"In addition, she was on four winning relay teams. She's a top threat in her two specialties, the 200 and 400 individual medleys. But she's in against Atwood and Cindy Plaisted of the U.S., the top two in the world."

"Canada should take the silver in the 400 freestyle and 400 medley and be a threat to the U.S. in the freestyle relay."

In diving, he expects Bev Boys to be close, along with team-mate Nancy Robertson.

On the eve of the Cali games, Canadian girls went to London and burned up the track at the British Amateur Athletic Association championships.

Miss Brill went six feet again. Debbie Van Kiekebelt high-jumped five-foot-10.

Stephanie Berto won the 100- and 200-metre dashes in 11.4 and 23.5, running with a crosswind.

Abbie Hoffman, making a comeback in international competition, ran a personal best of 2.04 to win the 800 metres.

Chris Pickard, statistician for the Canadian Track and Field Association, says Canadians should win three golds, several silver medals and a dozen bronzes.

"Our best chances in the gold-medal department come from the girls, where Debbie Van Kiekebelt and Penny May have recorded more than 5000 points in the pentathlon."

He feels they could come 1-2 in this event.

"Brill is still the best girl high-jumper in the Americas and, if still on form, should win the gold. If not, Patty Wilson could take it all, unless Yvonne Saunders of Jamaica provides an upset.

"Penny May and Brenda Eisler are well over 21 feet in the long jump and could be a double threat.

"Carol Marin in the discus will team with Joan Pavelich to provide at least one medal. Nancy McCredie, defending Pan-Am champion, is still among the best shot putters."

He desn't see Berto, Patti Loverock "or anyone else" beating Iris Cavis in the 100.

"In most of the men's events, however, it will be two United States competitors winning medals with Canadians, Jamaicans, Cubans, Trinidadians and others from South America picking up those medals not won by the Mexican distance runners."

The Canadian contingent, about 450 when you count athletes, coaches and headquarters personnel, is the largest ever sent to an international event.

Canada is traditionally strong in judo and marksmanship; her women's gymnasts could come through, as could a cyclist or two.

Sailing is an unknown quantity and as for rowing, well, this doesn't appear to be Canada's year.

But you never can tell, there will probably be medals where they are least expected.

Take the case of Bob Chambreault, heavyweight wrestler from Montreal.

He won a gold medal for Canada in the Commonwealth Games five years ago without winning a match — something to do with the scoring system.

AT BISLEY

Record Effort For 5th Place

BISLEY, England (CP) — A 12-man contingent representing the Canadian forces broke the record in the inter-services short-range team match at the Commonwealth shoot Tuesday but finished no better than fifth.

Results tabulated today showed the Canadians with 1,119 out of a possible 1,200 at 300 and 600 yards, two better than the old mark.

But the win went to the RAF team with 1,133, and three other British groups placed ahead of the Canadians as Bisley's improved ammunition continued to produce extraordinarily high scores in just about every event.

Top Canadian shot was Frank Jermey of Kingston, Ont., a permanent forces master warrant officer shooting with the Dominion of Canada Rifle Association team borrowed to augment the 3rd Battalion crew from the Royal 22nd Regiment. Jeremy scored 98 of a possible 100.

Another Canadian placing high in overnight compilations was Derek Daines of Vancouver, who was ranked third and fourth out of about 1,200 competitors in two matches shot earlier.

The 42-year-old Daines, on his sixth trip to Bisley with the DCRA, finished third in the Elkington event based on matches at 900 and 100 yards. He was fourth in the Palma aggregate at 800, 900 and 1,000 yards.

TRAILS BY ONE

Daines was one point behind the British winner of the Elkington, with 144 of a possible 150. He got 143 in the Palma, two behind the winner from Zambia.

Gerry Ouellette of Windsor, Ont., also shot 143 in the Palma for fifth, dropping behind because of fewer shots in the inner "V" ring of the bull's-eye.

In the Young Riflemen's aggregate for four events ranging up to 600 yards, two of the Canadian cadet team scored 190 to finish sixth and seventh behind the British winner with 194 out of 200.

They were Mike Kalbun of Renfrew, Ont., fifth, and Pete Haggerty of Kingston, sixth.

Here are the scores of the Canadians behind Jermey in the inter-services match:

Lt.-Col. John Brick, Ottawa, member of the DCRA team, Cpl. Lucien Delarosbil, Quebec City, and Cpl. Carol Potvin, Courcelette, Que., all with 96; Cpl. Laval Mercier, Loretteville, 95; Cpl. Claude Hamel, Val St. Michel, Cpl. Roger Gingras, Loretteville, and Cpl. Ghislain Tremblay, Val St. Michel, all with 94; Cpl. Roger Gagne, Quebec City, 93; Sgt. Joe Daigle, Shannon, Que., 92; Cpl. Andy Bienvenu, Quebec City, 86, and Sgt. Bob Labreoque, Quebec City, 85.

Shooting for the St. George Trophy got under way Tuesday and at least seven Canadians — including three from British Columbia — are expected to advance to the second stage. Results of Tuesday's first stage, over 300 yards, will not be made official until later today.

A ROCKNE DISCIPLE

OGDENSBURG, N.Y. (AP) — Joseph R. Brandy, Sr., quarterback of the Notre Dame football teams of 1918-20 under coach Knute Rockne, died here Tuesday.

Bev Pinney of Maple Ridge, B.C., fired a possible 75, getting 10 of his 15 shots into the inner V-ring. Windsor's Judy Ouellette, the only woman member of the Canadian team; and Bert Besteck of Winnipeg, both with 74s; Ken Allen, Edmonton, and Vic Finholm, Parksville, B.C., 73; Lt.-Col. John Brick, Ottawa, and Bill Lightburn, Mission City, B.C., both with 72, are expected to pass into the second stage.

Football Fans Need Rulebook

By The Canadian Press

You'll be able to tell the players in the Canadian Football League without a program this year—but you may need a new rule book to follow the play.

The CFL has amended the old book to make the game easier to follow for the fans, even if it means crossing up the sports writers.

For instance, in an exhibition game between Montreal Alouettes and Toronto Argonauts, Tom Johansen tried for a field goal on the last play of the first half.

The ball hit the goalpost, bounced into the end zone and reluctantly wobbled out of ounds.

Near consternation raged in the press box. Was the ball alive or dead? Was it a single or was it Montreal's ball out at the 25-yard line? Why didn't quarterback Joe Theismann, who held for Johansen, leap on to the ball in the end zone for six points—the ball was live wasn't it and Theismann was obviously onside.

Toronto, the kicking team, was awarded a single because, under the new rules, the ball was live. Had it fallen back on to the field of play, it would have been dead.

ONLY KICKER ONSIDE

As for Theismann being onside—not so, ruled Greg Fulton, statistician for the CFL. Only the kicker is onside.

The live-ball-in-the-end-zone rule is new this year.

Also an innovation will be players' names, "prominently displayed on the back" in let ters three inches high above the numbers. British Columbia Lions adopted this feature in 1970 and it proved so popular that ie has been made mandatory for all clubs in league and playoff.

Sports writers and fans alike have cursed in the past when—on a crucial measurement—the ball has been obscured by the size—14 boots of players clustering around.

Not this year. The new rule says:

"During a measurement for a first down, only the two captains shall be permitted in the viciniey of the measurement while the other players must remain some distance away. This should prove to be especially popular to fans watching the game on television."

Have you ever growled with impatience during those seemingly interminable on-field conferences between the officials and team captains?

Well, the CFL isn't cutting out the confrontations, but they are allocating the blame. The official involved will salute the team requesting an explanation of a penalty or option.

As previously announced, the ball will be a quarter of an inch less in the fat circumference: half time shall be 15 minutes long instead of a general 20 minutes.

SELECTED to the B.C. squad scheduled to compete in the Canadian women's inter-provincial golf championship Aug. 11-14 at Vancouver's Capilano Club is Dale Shaw of Victoria (above). Others picked for the team are Gail Havey Moore, Marilyn Palmer and Caroline Larsen, all of Vancouver. Mrs. Moore was an automatic choice as defending national champion while Miss Palmer had 381 points, Miss Shaw 400 and Miss Larsen 405 in qualifying rounds that concluded Tuesday in Kamloops.

Pitcher Carries Load To Pace Gorge Upset

Pitcher Stan Gibb crossed home plate three times Tuesday to aid his own victory as Gorge Hotel upset Farmer Construction 11-9 in a Victoria Senior Amateur Baseball League game at Royal Athletic Park.

Gibb, who recorded his fourth victory in five pitching starts, drew a base on balls for his first turn, was hit by the opposing pitcher to gain base for his second and then singled on his way to the third.

Gary Andrews also helped at the plate by connecting for a bases-loaded triple in the second inning.

Gordie Strongman had four hits for four trips to the plate, scored twice and drove in one run for Farmers.

Victory boosted Gorge to within two and one-half points of second-place Farmers.

District Talent Getting a Chance

Kansas City Royals Baseball Academy of Sarasota, Florida, will hold a one-day tryout camp for local players Friday, beginning at 10 a.m. at Lambrick Park.

The tryout will be conducted by four members of the Royals' scouting staff under Jim Ennis.

Candidates are asked to wear uniforms or clothing which will not impede their movements as well as baseball or gym shoes.

The American League squad picked 42 players out of a total of 7,682 that tried out for the unique educational institution during the inaugural year of 1970.

LESSONS OFFERED

Featured at the academy are individualized instruction in baseball, courses in English, history, human relations, personal finance, speech, basic conditioning and personal health. Tuition, books, room and board are provided for the trainees.

In addition, students receive $100 a month for the first 90 days, $150 per month for the next 90 and $280 monthly thereafter.

The program runs from August until May and the student's day is divided into academic studies in the morning (three days a week at nearby Manatee Junior college and the other two at the academy) and four hours of baseball practice in the afternoon in a 120-acre, five-diamond complex.

Eligibility requirements are a high school diploma or students with no remaining eligibility for high school and an outstanding athletic ability — although previous experience in baseball is not mandatory.

Prospective candidates also would be able to run 60 yards in 6.9 seconds or under.

Sudan Masses Chant Support As New Leaders Tighten Grip

CAIRO (Reuter) — Sudan remained closed to the outside world today while its new leftwing military leaders worked to strengthen their hold on what is Africa's largest nation in area.

The whereabouts of former president Jaafer Al-Nimeiry officially remained a mystery two days after a coup which swept him from power, but the authoritative Cairo newspaper Al Ahram reported today he was being held under house arrest in Khartoum.

Reuter correspondent Saad Es Sheikh reported Tuesday from the Sudanese capital that crowds of demonstrators marched in scorching heat chanting slogans backing the new government, which has promised to restore freedom to all political parties.

Sheikh said the new leadership ordered the release of 49 political prisoners jailed by Nimeiry and declared Sudan would become an "independent Democratic republic."

OUTLAWED PARTY

Nimeiry had banned all political parties, including an active Communist party.

The seven-man ruling revolutionary council, announced Tuesday, is headed by Lt.-Col. Babkr El-Noor, one of the three left-wing ministers fired by Nimeiry last fall during a crackdown against Communists.

Another was Maj. Hashem El Atta, a 35-year-old former military attache who led Monday's swift and apparently bloodless coup and who now has been made commander-in-chief of the armed forces and vice-chairman.

Also on the new council is Maj. Mahgoub Osman, the brother of Mahgoub Abdel-Khaliq, the secreatry-general and leader of the Sudanese Communist Party. Nimeri had jailed Abdel Khaliq, who escaped from prison with the help of an army officer earlier this month.

Hamdalla, who may be named prime minister, was travelling to Khartoum Tuesday night, the official Iraq news agency reported, and Al Noor was flying from London.

ARMY SUPPORT

The Sudan's national radio said in an evening broadcast that the council had received telegrams of support from all units of the country's 28,000-man army. Most of them are stationed in the south, trying to put down black African tribesmen rebelling against the rule of the brown-skinned, Arabic-speaking Moslems who make up most of the Sudan's population.

Crowds of jubilant Sudanese reportedly marched through the streets of Khartoum Tuesday, chanting slogans of support for the new army rulers.

Maj. Al Atta apparently met no resistence when he moved against Nimeiri Monday night in Khartoum. His strike appears to have been almost a carbon copy of Nimeiri's own coup two years earlier. One armored division supplied enough tanks to ring the presidential palace, located on the banks of the Nile, and to block the three bridges that span the Nile and provide the only approaches to the city. Gen. Osman Sharaf, commander of the palace guard, helped in the coup.

AL-NIMIERY

HOT SUMMER

And, as Nimeiri had in May, 1969, Atta waited for Khartoum's blistering summer to drive key officials out of town on vacation or official trips. Nimeiri's defence minister, foreign minister, information minister and half a dozen other key officials were reported to have been abroad when the coup occurred.

Foreign minister Farouk Abu Issa was reported to have been arrested Monday before the coup was announced as he returned from a visit to the United Nations.

Defence Minister Khalid Hassan Abbas, the second strongest man in Nimeiri's regime, hurriedly left Belgrade, telling reporters he would fly to Cairo and then to Khartoum "to find out what is going on."

Nimeiri and four other members of the council are believed to be under arrest, although there was no official confirmation of this. Observers here noted that Al Atta's first broadcasts after the takeover where not particularly harsh toward Nimeiri.

One major criticism in the speech was the failure of Nimeiri's government to implement agreements with socialist countries. Al Atta said the Sudan was "grateful to friendly socialist countries, and at their head the Soviet Union." Nimeiri had in the past year tried to mitigate the growing Soviet influence in the Sudan by stepping up contacts with mainland China and by seeking more support from Scandinavian countries and France.

SOVIET INFLUENCE

Diplomats here expect soviet influence to increase even more sharply now. There are already more than 1,000 Russian technicians in the Sudan, including more than 200 military experts.

Domestically, the overthrow of the 41-year-old Nimeiri is likely to be attributed to his attempt to create a political centre in a country where none has ever existed.

The London Times said Noor has been residing in the British capital since July 7, undergoing a medical examination.

He said he hopes to return to Khartoum as soon as possible, adding that coup plans had been under discussion since February.

The new revolutionary council issued decrees abolishing the executive committee of the recently-established Socialist Union, the intelligence apparatus and the youth's and women's battalion recently set up by Nimeiri to replace former Communist-dominated groups.

Meanwhile, Cairo airport was informed that all flights into Khartoum were still banned, although aircraft could use Sudanese air space.

Brewery Workers Locked Out

VANCOUVER (CP) — Molson Brewery B.C. Ltd., Tuesday locked out 109 workers involved in a contract dispute following a strike Monday by 141 employees at Labatt Brewery of B.C. Ltd.

Alex Lipp, business agent for local 300 of the Brewery and Soft Drink Workers' Union, said the lockout at Molson's began at 4:30 p.m. "And our boys didn't seem to be too worried when it happened," he said. "Most of them rushed to the beaches, no doubt to sun themselves and probably enjoy the competition's refreshment."

The contract talks got hung up last week when both sides could not agree on the length of the contract. The companies want the contract to be 18 months from April this year to December, 1972.

MISSION (CP) — RCMP have charged a 64-year-old Hatzic resident with cultivating marijuana.

Police said George Nelson Whatley will appear in Mission provincial court next Tuesday. He entered no plea in an earlier appearance.

The elderly man was charged after police said they found a substantial number of marijuana plants — some of them three feet high — growing in the back yard of a Fraser Valley residence.

MORAL CRUSADE URGED

Just Talking About VD Does Nothing

By KORKY KOROLUK

TORONTO (CP) — "People think that talking about venereal disease settles everything. That's baloney. We've got to talk about morals."

With that, Dr. Gordon Bates, an 85-year-old dynamo, settled in to an interview that turned instead into a two-hour discussion on modern mores, the evils of the welfare state and the need for preventive medicine.

Dr. Bates is general director of the Health League of Canada, and has been the moving force in the organization since it was founded in 1919 as the National Council for Combating Venereal Disease. Through the organization's several evolutions, he has remained firmly in control.

URGES MORAL CRUSADE

His latest project is a campaign to send letters to all physicians in Canada, asking for donations to finance a public education campaign to fight drug addiction, illegitimacy and venereal disease.

He sees the campaign as a chance for doctors to "rehabilitate themselves," a chance "to unite in taking the lead in a crusade to improve our moral standards," and to "prevent the indifference which has permitted us to tolerate spectacular increases in the costs of medical care, much of which could be avoided if we put our hearts into united action to produce rather a sane instead of a permissive and opulent society."

The physicians, he says, need rehabilitation because of what he considers to be their indiscriminate prescription of penicillin for venereal disease and oral contraceptives, the two major factors in what he sees as society's declining moral state.

If doctors were moral, he says, such things as abortion could be left up to them. He says he is firmly against dissemination of birth control and abortion information to junior teen-agers, believing that "abortions shouldn't be necessary" in a well-informed and moral society.

FAVORS PREVENTION

Dr. Bates says he believes far too much emphasis is placed on curative medicine, which fills hospitals, creates the need for new hospitals and sends medical costs skyrocketing. He would rather see the emphasis on prevention, keeping people out of hospitals. What he sees as the over-emphasis on curative medicine, he blames on welfare-minded politicians and administrators who cannot grasp the concept of prevention. And he says the entire concept of welfare leads to a degree of state control which is totally unacceptable to him.

The disenchantment with society displayed by many young people today he attributes to lack of parental instruction and lack of moral preaching from the pulpit.

He says that what is happening in society today is "upsetting to the emotions and the old ideals."

"Why, the church doesn't know where it's going, either."

Dr. Bates says he believes that he and the health league can give direction to society through its present campaign, "by trying to create an informed democracy which may be effective in dissolving the clouds of ignorance, pestilence and poverty which have plagued humantiy through the dark ages of the past."

Before the Judge

Two men pleaded guilty Tuesday to assaulting a 14-year-old youth in the early morning hours and stealing $7.45 from him.

Rodney C. Fraser, 21, of 1266 Johnson, and Allan Louie, 20, of 1281 Pembroke, were charged with robbery with violence and remanded by Judge William Ostler until today for sentence.

A police officer testified that the two accused with a 16-year-old juvenile accosted the 14-year-old with a 13-year-old companion in the 1200-block Johnson about 2:15 a.m. Tuesday.

The policeman said the 14-year-old was struck in the face several times and the 13-year-old fled.

The two accused with the juvenile, the officer said, demanded the youngster's money and he handed over $7.45 which was split among them.

Fraser's record included convictions for theft, attempted theft and breaking, entering and theft. Louie's included breach of recognizance, auto theft, and breaking, entering and theft convictions.

Cameron R. Imlach, 18, of 1681 Pear, was fined $100 for the possession of a stolen 10-speed bicycle. He pleaded guilty earlier.

* * *

Maurice P. Smith, 18, of 1453 Denman, was given a suspended sentence with an 18-month probation for shoplifting a leather belt from Woolco department store.

He pleaded guilty earlier.

* * *

Richard B. Barter, 29, of Port Coquitlam, was fined $75 when he was found guilty of assault causing bodily harm.

The charge involved an attack by Barter on the branch manager of a local gas station when the accused declined to move a tractor-trailer truck on the station parking lot.

The branch manager suffered bruises, abraisions and sore teeth, court was told, as a result of blows from Barter.

U.S. MAIL UNION SIGNS $1 BILLION FIRST CONTRACT

WASHINGTON (AP) — Postal Union leaders have signed their first agreement with the new United States postal service, a $1 billion contract providing more than $1,700 in pay increases for the average employee during the next two years.

Meanwhile, the United Steelworkers of America ordered locals to conduct strike-authorization votes. The first to do so, Local 2633 in Johnstown, Pa., approved a walkout. The union has told the mine major producers it will not extend the present contract beyond the 12:01 a.m. Aug. 1 expiration date.

Negotiators for the railways and the United Transportation Union kept at their bargaining, trying to end a dispute largely over work rules. The UTU strike against the Southern Railroad and Union Pacific went into the sixth day, and a strike deadline still stands Saturday for nine other railways.

Bell system telephone workers came back to work as they moved into the long mail ratification process. In New York, 26 local leaders voted not to return, having voiced dissatisfaction with vacation and pension provisions of the tentative agreement. In Phoenix, Ariz., more than 1,000 members of Local 8519 said they would stay off the job until the contract is ratified.

Assistant Labor Secretary W. J. Usery, mediator in the six months of postal bargaining, said leaders of the seven unions, representing 650,000 employees, got job protection—no layoffs—in exchange for the management option to implement any technological improvements to make the postal service more efficient.

RECEIVE FIVE RAISES

The $1,700 wage improvement breaks down to a $300 lump payment for all employees with more than six months on the job, five raises of $250 each during the next two years, and a cost-of-living clause, providing increases up to $160 a year.

Usery said the agreement covers only the essentials. Some 2,400 issues remain to be negotiated later.

Postmaster-General Winton Blount presided at the formal signing of the agreement.

While members of the Communication Workers of America were, for the most part, returning to their jobs after a settlement in the Bell Telephone strike, 26 local leaders in New York voted Tuesday to stay off the job rather than accept the new contract.

They represent 40,000 CWA workers in New York state, one-tenth of the national membership.

The United Steelworkers Union announced a new industry offer for 35,000 striking copper workers and scheduled a Saturday meeting in Salt Lake City. No details were given.

Treatment of Illness in Poor Not City's Problem: Official

MONTREAL (CP) — Gerard Niding, chairman of the city's executive committee, said Tuesday that treatment of illness is a provincial responsibility and that the city is not to blame for bad health conditions in poor areas of the city.

Mr. Niding was commenting on a report prepared by city health officials and the Montreal Catholic school board which showed that more than half of the 3,424 children examined from eight schools in underprivileged areas were physically sick and that about 10 per cent were so ill they required hospital care.

"I don't think the city is to blame if a welfare father spends his cheque on beer instead of milk, and marijuana instead of bread," he said.

Mayor Jean Drapeau was unavailable for comment on the study.

The report, released Monday, said the incidence of disease is especially high in underprivileged areas, mostly because of inadequate diets. Low nourishment diets leave disease-resistance mechanisms in children nearly useless.

HELP PLANNED

George Springate, Liberal member of the national assembly for St. Anne, said that health clinics being planned for the area by the provincial government will go a long way to ease the area's health problems.

He said the "incredibly bad health situation" is due to a "totally inadequate social-welfare system" and the "dreadful economy of the area."

He refused to blame either the city or the province for the conditions.

The study is the product of an experimental health care program. The city agreed to co-operate by providing city-employed doctors to staff the program.

Expanding by eight schools a year, the program will include 40 units when completed in 1974.

TAKEN TO HOSPITAL

As a result of the study, 312 children have been referred to hospital for treatment. Another 71 were taken directly to hospital and 31 were treated by private physicians.

Dr. Richard Marsen, a Montreal Catholic school board health officer said "curative health programs" are not the usual responsibility of the school boards, but the demonstrated need for such a program left the board with little choice but to take the initiative.

School health programs normally deal with preventive medical treatment, vaccinating youngsters and examining them physically. Treatment is normally left in the hands of family physicians.

The school board decided on the curative program in an effort to improve the school progress of the youngsters and to cut down an exceptional absenteeism rate.

"If they are constantly sick, fatigued, hungry, badly clothed and not too clean, they are seriously distracted in school," Dr. Marsen said. "They become a problem for the teacher. They have a high absenteeism rate. Their school progress is delayed."

In one school included in the program nearly 30 per cent of the 225 students are "backward in school."

He said he has sent the initial results of the study to provincial government authorities who are to decide if it should be continued.

Dr. Pat Forbes of the Montreal Children's Hospital medical clinic says hospitals which treat the bulk of underprivileged youngsters are daily faced with what might be called "poor kids" diseases.

He said that anemia and rickets are the most serious of the many diseases afflicting children from underprivileged areas.

ABOUT PEOPLE

The Happy Breed Of Garbage Men

You meet such interesting people in the newspaper business — Old Cliche.

★ ★ ★

If I learned anything at all in several years of prowling the globe in search of news — and sometimes I wonder — it is that the happiest workers of the world are garbage collectors.

From the boisterous dustmen of Britain to the ribald basuradors of Buenos Aires they are, without exception, a marvellously, mysteriously happy-go-lucky breed.

Well, there I was, sharing my wee lunch-time sandwich with the gulls at Clover Point, when the City of Victoria garbage truck No. 324 pulled up ahead. Five of the crew strolled, laughing and with great good humor, to have their sandwiches on the beach and the driver himself stepped down from the cab, bearing a No. Nine iron, and proceeded to loft some sweet-looking approach shots on the grassy oval there. I mean, it could only happen in dear old Victoria.

So that's how I came to meet Doug Hudlin, Victoria-born, aged 48, an 18-handicapper at Cedar Hill though, frankly, I'd refuse to play him on those terms, descendant of Missouri slaves, and one of the handsomest men in our town. To several thousand Victorian youngsters he's best known as a baseball umpire — been 20 years president of the Victoria Umpires' Association and a long-time consultant for the Little League — and a man who will, on occasion, summarily evict an obstreperous, overly-partisan parent from the stands.

Doug's great-grandfather fled from slavery in Missouri to farm in Saanich, but the Hudlin side of the family settled in Victoria purely by chance. It was here, at Willows race track, that Doug's father, an itinerant jockey on the North American circuit, faced up to a weight problem, liked the town, settled down. One reason, Doug now thinks, is that Victoria, then and now, has been refreshingly free of overt discrimination.

How to explain the international figure of The Jolly Garbageman? Doug thinks there are many answers.

"There must be a whole library shelf of books with garbagemen jokes of the past," he reflected, "but today the work isn't considered comical or beneath a man's dignity. Just the opposite, in fact. You're doing an absolutely essential service, one of the few jobs that cause people to be glad to see you when you pull up at their door. Some of that feeling rubs off on a man, I guess. You're not selling or buying. You're just doing something that has to be done.

"The work isn't nearly as tough as it was when I went into it 18 years ago. The new kinds of collecting equipment have helped, but mainly it's because the conversion to oil means that there aren't the heavy cans of ashes that used to be murder on a man's back. Still, we work mighty hard, cover about 450 houses a day, and, like baseball, it's entirely a team effort. Maybe that helps to explain the good spirits. Men who work as a team, relying on the next man to carry his share, always seem to get along well.

"Our particular six-man crew on 324 has been together now for something like seven years. Besides myself there's Willie, John, Art, Nick and Kaar. We're a sort of little United Nations with our backgrounds in the southern States, England, Poland, Germany, Norway and the Ukraine. You couldn't want a more relaxed, friendly group of men.

"Oh, sure, there are some things that bug you. Robert Frost said you could tell a man by the fences he makes and we can tell a woman by the garbage she leaves. Ah, but you take the good with the bad, eh? That's life."

Ever the non-conformist, I dropped in to the Elite barber shop on Fort Street for a trim and darned if the man behind the chair wasn't my old friend Ted Ashlee, a long, lean bloke who used to cut my hair when it was all there and before the eternal snow had fallen. Long before your time, Shnooky.

The barber business these days isn't terrible, as I would have guessed. It's disastrous. Ted hasn't seen a client under the age of 35 for so long that he's come to think of himself as a specialist in tonsorial geriatrics.

Why, then, did he look so remarkably content and at peace with the world? The answer is that, at the age of 57, Ted is on the brink of a whole new career that has nothing whatever to do with hair.

It began six years ago when he moved from Duncan to Vancouver, found the big town a hateful, boring place and enrolled in a course of creative writing "just for something to do." The best advice he got in the course — the best advice any would-be writer ever gets — was to write about what he knew. In Ted's case that went back to an early career as a merchant seaman and deep-sea fisherman.

Against all the incredible odds, his first short story was accepted by Canadian Boy, the Scouts' magazine. That, in turn, led to several more that attracted the interest of Holt, Rinehart and Winston, the publishers, who commissioned him to write the texts for some illustrated children's books.

In his spare time, over 14 months, Ted put together his first novel for young readers. It's called "Voyage Into Danger," a cracking good adventure story set in the Queen Charlottes, published in Canada and Britain and now at your favorite book shop. He now has another in the works. If the royalties are as green as they promise to be, Ted won't mind if you wear your hair down to your knees, Shnooky.

We met Eric and Jean Michelsen because, you see, we have this VIP editor friend who sneaks off occasionally to the golf course.

His system is diabolically clever. Spreads his most important papers on his desk, places his reading glasses and pen on top of them and leaves his desk lamp burning. The net effect is that of a man who has just stepped around the corner for a moment, perhaps to an important executive conference or the men's room. It hasn't fooled anyone, of course, but eases his conscience.

Naturally, he favors the more obscure golf courses where he's unlikely to run into his seniors — whose desk lamps are also burning — and this is how we came to play Broome Hill, the nine-hole course at Sooke and truly a delight.

Eric, who is 51, was a logger until, a dozen years ago in a summer of strikes and fires in the forest, he began to wonder if there wasn't a more reliable vocation. An informal survey of Sooke indicated that there were exactly seven golfers in the vicinity. Undaunted, as the saying goes, he and Jean bought the old 96-acre Comeau farm, spent a year-and-a-half converting its hilly pastures into nine challenging and scenic holes and began the construction of a club house. It was an act of faith that's paid off handsomely.

Like Gregarah, on Prospect Lake, another of my favorites, Broome Hill seems to have been laid out by an architect who hated the human race, but the pain of double-bogeys is eased by gorgeous views of the Olympics and the Sooke range. It plays to a par 64 and the course record, shared by several, is 59.

There are now more than 200 members, apart from the considerable numbers of Victorians who make regular pilgrimages, and the green fees are just $2 on week days, $3 on weekends. Which is nice, too.

Farmers For A Day

Melanie Douglas (left) of San Diego and Marianne Girard of Montreal are introduced to the local version of strawberry fields at Cool-Aid's three-acre farm in Saanich. Cool-Aid hires young travellers on a daily basis to help run the farm. About 190 young people have worked on the farm so far for $8 a day. In centre is farm organizer Rick Stamford. Blood Pours In

Eighteen donors gave blood in the first half-hour of today's clinic at the University of Victoria, indicating a three-day drive by the Red Cross to build critically low supplies will finish as strong as it started.

Donors totalled 247 Tuesday, down from 276 Monday but well over the minimum objective the local Red Cross traditionally sets of 150 a day.

Doctors at Royal Jubilee and St. Joseph's Hospitals said last week that blood was in such short supply some surgery was in danger of being cancelled. The hospitals recently received only half their requested allotments from the Red Cross central supply in Vancouver.

An international difference in donor practices prevented Tuesday's total passing the total of donors on Monday.

Two busloads, about 80 Japanese sailors from the defence ships Katori and Yamagumo in port, turned up at Red Cross House in the afternoon to give blood. They had to depart without doing so.

The reason, detailed in part through an interpreter:

The Japanese sailors give blood regularly, apparently once a month, but only 200 ccs a time.

Canadian donors give about 480 ccs and the amount of preservative in the plastic containers for donations is based on that size. The containers are antiseptically sealed and there was no way to adjust the amount of preservative.

Charles MacNeill, supervisor of the local Red Cross blood panel, said today he and his staff were "most appreciative" of the Japanese effort and "we were all very disappointed; it was just unfortunate circumstances."

13 PER CENT FIGURE MISLEADING

Doctors Richer? Well, Maybe

By BRUCE YEMEN

In spite of an almost 13 per cent increase in gross medicare payments to B.C. doctors, there is no solid proof that most doctors made substantially more money last year than in the previous year.

Published for the third time since B.C. joined national medicare in 1968, figures showing medicare payments to doctors fail to give more than a general guide to their financial fortunes.

●

The figures are published by the Medical Services Commission which administers the over-all medical care plan in B.C. The parliamentary library and the public library will have a copy of the list of payments.

While payments to doctors for services under the medicare plan increased by almost 13 per cent to $128 million, there may have been as many as five per cent more doctors receiving payments.

In addition, the doctors received a fee increase of about 3.5 per cent at the end of 1969, which means the fiscal year comparisons for 1970-71 and 1969-70 are not on the same fee base.

For nine months of the 1969-70 fiscal year, doctors were working for a lower fee, which means it isn't fair to suggest they made 13 or even eight per cent more money this past year by churning more patients through their offices.

A further complication is that doctors' expenses increased as a result of salary increases granted to nurses. The rising cost of equipment and other supplies also ate into increased income.

But a glance through the list of payments shows that wide disparities continue to exist in the payments earned within different branches of medical practice.

A Victoria family doctor, for instance, shows payments of about $55,000 for each of the two years. Another holds steady around $35,000. But another who pulled in $19,000 two years ago is now up to $35,000. But it turns out he is a young doctor who is building up a practice.

A Victoria eye specialist who received $95,000 in payments in 1969-70 is down to $83,000 in the latest list, possibly because of provincial government cutbacks in allowable eye examinations from once a year to once every two years.

But another eye specialist, equally well established in practice, held steady at $65,000 for each of the years.

A radiologist with $130,000 in payments in 1969-70 received $167,000 in the latest year.

Publication of the figures was made mandatory by the provincial cabinet about two years ago. The move brought the medicare plan into line with other public agencies which also must publish lists of payments of more than $500 to individuals and companies.

Spokesmen for the Medical Services Commission have said in the past that they have adequate control over individual doctors abusing the plan, because they keep a "statistical profile" on each doctor.

●

The fact that the medicare list is the only one of its kind — except the provincial government's own Public Accounts — which is voluntarily given to the press has strengthened the belief that the government is using publicity to hold down doctors' wage demands as a group rather than to expose individual abuses.

The government has made no move to provide the kind of supporting information necessary to evaluate individual doctor's payments, such as how hard each doctor works.

The government's success in convincing doctors to defer any increases in their fees for this year appears to have helped provide a whopping 40 per cent increase in federal contributions to the medicare plan in the past year — $51 million instead of $36 million.

No Change to Public—Mayors

Two Greater Victoria mayors said today there will be no basic change in service to the public under the proposed amalgamated social services agency under the Capital Regional District.

Esquimalt Mayor Art Young said no one questions the work of Family and Children's Service.

The F and CS had agreed it should be a regional function, but not under the CRD but another, elected board, he said. (See also Page 40.)

In the future, many other things — library, fire, police — could be regionalized.

"If we follow your thinking we must elect a new board for each function," he said.

★ ★ ★

He made the comments during a meeting this morning of the regional district's social services committee and F and CS officials.

Oak Bay Mayor Frances Elford said regional board directors, although they deal with sewers and parks, are concerned with human beings "otherwise they would not run for public office. As I understand it, none of the good works by F and CS would be thrown away. None of the ability to initiate new programs need be lost. There's no necessity for anyone in F and CS to feel loss of seniority and position."

John Gordon, an F and CS director, said, "We have accepted the principle of regionalization. I was not aware until this morning that the plan outlines is flexible."

Mayor Back At the End Of Summer?

Mayor Courtney Haddock will be out of hospital in two weeks and able to resume "some" city hall duties by the end of the summer, his doctor said Tuesday.

Dr. Lumir L. Ptak said the mayor's condition continues to improve. He now is listed in satisfactory condition and resting comfortably in the intensive care unit at Royal Jubilee Hospital.

The doctor also cleared up confusion about the nature of Haddock's illness, variously reported by sources including the mayor himself — as angina and heart attack.

Haddock, 65, did in fact suffer an angina attack, a painful contraction of blood vessels in the heart area.

This was followed by a coronary occlusion with myocardial infarction — "in layman's terms, a heart attack," Ptak said.

"In any event, the mayor's trouble went beyond angina."

After Haddock was felled last Tuesday, a terse announcement from acting mayor Tom Christie said the mayor suffered a heart attack.

Then, Monday night, Haddock left his hospital bed to telephone a radio hot line program. While he was "under medication," Ptak said, the mayor described his condition as angina only and said he would be back in harness at city hall soon.

Not so, said Ptak.

ABOUT THIS TIME LAST week a back-of-the-nose-tickle signalled an unwelcome message. Summer cold coming on, and as everyone knows, that kind is the hardest to shake.

For one thing, a summer cold rarely comes out and fights. It pesters and niggles. Its manifestations are a stuffy head, a sore throat, wandering aches and pains, and a general no-good feeling.

I lugged along until the weekend, when a choice presented itself. Give in to the sneaky virus and be miserable in bed, or head miserably up-Island as we'd planned.

What tipped the balance was a new fly-rod that needed testing — a labor of love that demands lively water, breeze, green outdoors and a more or less vertical stance.

"Anyway," Ron said, "I'll do the driving. You and your germs can take it easy on the back seat."

So Ron and Win loaded up while I straw-bossed the job as a privileged character. Then we angled through Saanich to a great north road burdened with the peak traffic of tourist season.

If grew on me that a summer cold does convey certain advantages.

A driver's freedom to look around is limited. He can never let his attention stray far from the road, whereas a back-seater can rubberneck at will. Then, when he has viewed his fill of cows in fields, mountains still snow-tipped and recreation vehicles of all styles and sizes, he can put his feet up and settle down for a nap. Sleep, after all, is the best healer.

Having delivered that unctuous pronouncement to the front-seaters, I slept clear up to Cougar Creek, a shaded waterbrook whose name enchants pilgrims from the smog-belt. One of its name-signs had been pinched perhaps to deck the wall of some city rumpus room.

At Shelter Bay we found Californians Gladys and Bert, who had trailered their 23-footer north behind their camper for a fishing holiday.

"Summer cold, eh?" Bert observed. He offered a bottle of curative stout, and suggested that a touch of salt air and a workout with a salmon might also be good medicine.

He was right. The cold began to retreat about the time an obliging six-pound coho hit in the good hole above Willow Point that evening. But I was still able to manage a pathetic cough or two next morning.

"What he needs," Ron prescribed at breakfast, "is good, hot sunshine to bake it out of him. I know a place that should be about right."

He drove us inland, first over blacktop then gravel, and finally on narrow red-earth roads that had once carried logging railway steel. That country has healed itself in the years since the loggers reaped, slash-burned and passed. It is clothed in young evergreen, with alder in the bottom-lands and blue lakes to temper its windless heat.

We came to a lake. A creek drained from it, chuckling through minor rapids or loafing deep and quiet as a meadow stream between brushy banks. Here was a perfect place for a man recovering from a summer cold to try a new fly-rod.

Ron warned me not to fall in, then vanished into the brush.

Win and I rigged up, crossed the creek by a set of decaying logs and found water to our liking.

The sun beat down. The stream flowed lazily. Across where water-lily pads edged a miniature cove, a fat little cutthroat trout flirted its tail at drifting insect. I tied a simulated wool-and-bucktail insect to my leader tip, and forgot to cough.

The new fly-rod couldn't have worked better. And though the saucy trout of the creek weren't large, this was idyllic fishing.

I enjoyed it until Ron and Win insisted that it would be better for my summer cold if we went back to the car.

The thing about a cold, summer or winter, is that it's going to run its course, as mine seems to have done. Naturally, I'm glad it's gone. But while it lasted, no guy with the miseries could have been more pampered!

Vancouver's Orphans Victims of Drug Abuse

Montague BRIDGMAN Ltd.
China Crystal Gifts
811 Government St 383-0821

VANCOUVER (CP) — Almost all Vancouver orphans taken in by the Catholic Family and Children's Services in the last two years have been victims of parents who died from an overdose of drugs, a service spokesman has reported.

"We have had approximately 50 orphans come to us in just a little over two years," protection surpervisor Kathy Glass said in an interview.

"Nearly all of them had parents or a parent who died as a result of taking drugs."

She said that in many cases, there was only one parent in the home.

MOTHER UNWED

"Either the mother was unwed or she had been deserted long ago by a husband who had vanished completely from the scene. In some cases the father was already dead. Or both parents were using drugs."

"One mother was found dead from an overdose of drugs in a skid road hotel room. She left seven children."

There were no children orphaned in Victoria during the 1970-71 term and there is no record of children being taken into care by Family and Children's Service because of drug abuse by parents.

Mrs. Bernice Packford, a supervisor with the service, said that although drugs might be a contributing factor in some cases, it would be only one of many reasons for taking a child into care.

REASONS LISTED

The supervisor pointed out that the service's annual report listed reasons for taking 131 children into care last year in this order: desertion, neglect and abuse, 60; emotional disturbance, 42; parental mental illness, 29.

"If drug abuse on the part of parents was the main reason for taking a significant number of children into care, I'm sure there would be a separate category," Mrs. Packford said.

Yesterday's marine activities off Beacon Hill Park sent me thumbing through my files in search of notes on Royal Navy ships that stood at anchor off the same shore and over in Royal Roads, one hundred or more years ago. Especially the six in a Flying Squadron that visited Victoria, a year before confederation.

Historians record that event as the most impressive scene in naval pageantry of Esquimalt Harbor before the days of sail were over. Vivid word pictures of the arrival of the six ships are preserved in our provincial archives.

★ ★ ★

It was shortly before noon on Sunday, May 15, 1870, that the long expected squadron was signalled as in sight from the Race Rock Light to Admiral Farquhar on board the flagship HMS Zealous in Esquimalt Harbor. Soon after, six war ships, with all sails set, hove in sight of the city.

A newspaper report of the day said "a breeze, sufficiently strong to fill every inch of canvas was blowing, and as the vessels rounded the rocks, the townspeople flocked to adjacent hills and points to witness the grand, picturesque sight.

"Off Albert Head, four of the ships were abreast, tall, stately and majestic, with the bright rays of the sun falling upon their snow-white sails, and the stiff breeze bowling them swiftly on toward Esquimalt.

"HMS Scylla was first to enter the harbor, followed by the Liverpool, flagship of Admiral Hornby. Off the entrance, the Liverpool saluted and the compliment was immediately acknowledged by HMS Zealous. Remaining ships followed one by one and took up positions assigned to them at the buoys."

The Flying Squadron made a two-week stay at Esquimalt and in that time there were regattas, dances, picnics, a luncheon party and a ball on the flagship and horse races and sports at Beacon Hill.

HMS Scylla was left behind when the squadron finally continued its cruise, having been replaced by HMS Charybdis. The squadron steamed away through Royal Roads until it was beyond Race Rocks, then stopped engines and "made sail to the southward, close-hauled, with a fresh westerly breeze."

Scylla was in and out of Esquimalt Harbor at irregular intervals until October 15, 1872, when she made her final farewells to Victoria and sailed back to England.

Here's a modern ghost story to liven up these lazy midsummer days. Friend of mine by the name of Brenda lives by herself in one of the old-time cottages still to be found here and there in Victoria. The kind that boasts fireplaces even in the bedrooms.

Recently she came out of a sound sleep in the grey hours before dawn, just in time to see the door of her bedroom slowly and soundlessly closing. It was an uncomfortable moment, she says. One in which a person didn't know whether to leave well enough alone or shout for help.

However, knowing it was impossible to go back to sleep until she had some idea of what it was all about, Brenda got up, grabbed a poker from the fireplace in her room, opened the door and looked out. Just in time to see a door at the end of the hall and leading to the basement, slowly closing.

After a long moment in which "I was ready to dive under the bed," she tip-toed along the hall and pulled the basement door open.

★ ★ ★

What she expected is still not quite clear in her mind. What she saw was her pet cat, sitting at the foot of the stairs and looking up at her with a "butter-wouldn't-melt-in-its-mouth" expression.

The cat was entangled in some knitting that had been on a chair in the bedroom.

"It must have been playing with the ball of wool," Brenda says, "dragged the knitting down on the floor and through the bedroom door where it caught just enough to pull that door closed . . . and the same thing must have happened at the basement door . . . Ghosts? Oh, No! . . . Just the cat! What a relief!"

BLACK POWER PLAY by Richard Cloverdale, 8, has captured 10-year-old Gail Stringer's, rook early in the game. The children are learning to play chess in one of the courses available in the Greater Victoria School Board's Summer Happening Program. Thirty-four elementary school students from all seven grades are attending classes Monday, Wednesday and Friday at Blanshard Street School. Mrs. E. V. Brydon, 85, is one of four volunteer instructors.

DEAR ABBY...

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: My daughter is being married soon. She will have a formal church wedding followed by a reception. Toward the end of the reception she plans to change into her going away clothes, for which she has slected a HotPants outfit. Abby, I have nothing against HotPants, but don't you think she could have selected something a little more appropriate?—Mother

DEAR MOTHER: Possibly not.

DEAR ABBY: That anecdote you printed about the hippie couple taking advantage of government services and then protesting the establishment made a good point, but was somewhat inaccurate. I hope you give equal time to the other side.

In 10 weeks I'll receive a Master of Science degree and I never could have made it without free clinics, government loans, a grant, and food stamps. I am grateful to the government for these services but cannot condone all the government does. That same government allows the right to free speech, assembly, and the right to dress the way I choose. Some people think anyone who wears Indian love beads and sandals is against the country. It just isn't so!

The youth movement has a violent minority (who, of course, are the ones we hear about on the news) that I can't agree with, just as the establishment has some narrow-minded citizens who would like to see all long-haired, bearded youths in jail or worse.

The real issues at stake involve so much more. (I've never seen a demonstration against the establishment; but lots for peace, women's rights, ecology.)

If only the young could benefit from the mistakes of their elders, and the old could listen to the fresh ideas of the young! How can we ever work together for peace, the environment, etc., when people like you pit one side against the other by printing that story?—Under 25 in Loma Linda

DEAR UNDER 25: It is not my intention to "pit" one side against the other, but the same freedom of speech which made it possible for "Over 30" to be heard, now makes it possible for you to be heard, Fair enough?

DEAR ABBY: Thank you from the bottom of my heart for recommending "A Doctor Speaks Out on Sexual Expression in Marriage" by Donald W. Hastings. Only by the grace of God did my wife and I manage to remain faithful to each other for 30 years. Our most intimate moments were marred because of my extreme insensitivity, and my beloved wife's shyness. In short, we were both extremely ignorant about sexual expression in marriage. Thanks to this excellent little book, we are finding life more beautiful every day.—Helped And Grateful

Businessmen and Housewives Call Because They're Lonely

Most of the 700 calls to Victoria's only 24-hour "listening service" have been made by lonely businessmen and middle-aged housewives.

The service — Need, or the Crisis Intervention and Public Information Society of Greater Victoria — has been operating on Yates St. since May 10. It received a $7,750 grant from the federal government's Opportunities for Youth Program.

Co-ordinator Dave Stewart, 22, a former Uvic psychology student, says lonliness seems to be the main problem of the service's clients.

"Unattached men between 35 and 60 and middle-aged, married women make up the majority of our lonely callers," Stewart said.

Although young drug-users have been known to make use of such telephone services, Stewart says that only a small number of Need's callers fall into this category.

The co-ordinator thinks that Cool-Aid, the city's only youth hostel, is handling most of the drug calls and other problems of transient youth.

"We don't cater to a particular group," Stewart said. "But we've had conspicuously low contact with kids. They're even more skeptical to call than are adults."

However, one young person who is apt to call Need is the teen-age girl who fears she is pregnant.

Try to Help Caller

"What the Need staff says to a caller depends entirely on what they hear," Stewart said. "It depends on the volunteer and how he feels he should handle it.

"If a girl called and said she was pregnant, we would give her whatever help we could," Stewart continued. "We want to find out what the person wants to do. Sometimes they know what they want, but don't know how to go about it.

"We provide people with the opportunity to make the decision themselves," Stewart added.

Need is staffed by 20 students who work part-time, and more than 100 volunteers, who range in age from 18 to 65, and include housewives, students, businessmen, professionals and grandparents.

All the workers undergo a short training session before they start answering calls. This session teaches the workers how to cope with their own feelings while dealing with other people's problems, and how to direct callers to other social services if their problems go beyond the "listening" stage.

Calls are put into two categories — emotional and physical.

Needs Often Short-Changed

"But our emotional needs are often shortchanged and are easily built into physical needs, such as drinking," Stewart pointed out.

Larry Axmaker, 30, head of Need's board of directors, says many people call for information about the service before calling back to blurt out their problems. This, he says, is a means of establishing "trust."

"It takes a certain amount of courage to spill out personal needs," Axmaker said. "But we're a media to avoid social stigmatism because we're anonymous.

"Confidentiality is one of the biggest things we have going for us," Stewart added. (Names aren't required, nor are they asked for.)

Workers have noticed that women are more specific than men about their problems. Men know when something is wrong, but often they can't pinpoint it, they said.

Students and volunteers like to use the word "need" because it doesn't carry the negative connotation of "problem."

"We're hoping people will call in to tell us what's important to them . . . before it becomes a problem," Stewart said. "It doesn't have to be a crisis."

"We're trying to co-ordinate people's needs through the community," Stewart added, reaching for the phone. "And build confidence and trust with our fellow man."

Feminists Gain More Equality Since 1970 March

By JUARATE KAZICKAS

NEW YORK (AP) — Whatever happened to the women's liberation movement?

Thousands of women marched last Aug. 26, demonstrating for equal pay, child care centres, abortion on demand and an end of sexism. But what are they doing now?

"Women's liberation has crested, but the national consciousness it has raised on sex discrimination is irreversible," said Betty Friedan, organizer of the 1970 strike.

"Women's liberation has turned into women's participation and what was a minority movement is becoming a majority movement at all levels. Women will no longer be barred from the mainstream of life."

Betty Friedan

CASES INCREASE

Court cases charging sex discrimination are increasing in number. Women candidates, many with strong feminist platforms, are priming for political battle. And almost daily, women move into yet another traditional male domain. Women are becoming generals, Senate pages, aquanauts, and rabbis, as well as truck drivers, letter carriers, or railway switch operators.

Some recent developments and firsts for women include:

—The United Presbyterian Church elected a woman as its top presiding officer. In other churches, the first woman was ordained as a Lutheran pastor, the American Baptists Convention named a woman as presirent, and Episcopalians allowed women to serve in the previously all-male House of Deputies.

—The first female mayor of a city larger than 200,000 was elected. Patricia Sewell Latting of Oklahoma City joined 13 other women who head cities with more than 30,000 population.

—The National Press Club in Washington finally admitted women members after 63 years.

—The U.S. treasury department graduated its first four female sky marshals to help deter potential hijackers.

—Pregnant stewardesses, married or not, now are given maternity leave by some airlines. They used to be fired.

—Air force Reserve Officers Training Corps became co-educational and women members with children are permitted to keep their careers in the service.

—The first woman was named to head a U.S. television bureau overseas: Aline Saarinen, who is going to Paris for the National Broadcasting Co.

—President Nixon opened four jobs in the $25,000- to $40,000-a-year category to women, including a top slot in the Civil Service Commission.

WOMEN'S LIB DOESN'T HAVE A CHANCE

Maltese Miss Has One Goal: Marriage

FAMILY SECTION

VALLETTA, Malta (AP) — "Women's lib? No thanks. We're happy as we are."

That's the young Maltese miss, whose parents slap curfews on dates, whose church tries to shield her from permissive sex, who must not be seen out alone at night.

She works, of course, but she is hardly a career girl. The hours spent at a typwriter or factory bench are for one single goal — marriage.

Women's lib hasn't a chance with this sun-kissed girl of the Mediterranean. For although she's sometimes irked by restrictions which would drive a North American or Central European girl straight into the arms of the nearest hippie, she's consumed by a dream of that biggest of all days when she marches down the church aisle, white-gowned and radiant, to the arms of her future husband.

Miss Malta works hard from the day she leaves school at 17. That's because the road to the altar is strewn with gold — most of it hers. Any self-respecting lass will pay a dowry of $2,400 or more to get her beau ceremonially tied up.

In most countries a girl's parents shoulder the costs of marriage ceremony and reception. But in Malta it's the girl's job, mother and father only chipping in with free board and lodging while she saves.

It's an expensive business by any standards.

"Since we girls began working, all this has become our responsibility," says 24-year-old secretary Elizabeth Galea. She earns up to $24 a week in an office. Many of her friends get only about $12 in a factory.

So engagements are long — at least five years. And, as Maltese youths are like youngsters everywhere, that can mean problems for a couple in love.

The Roman Catholic Church in this traditional stronghold of the devout — 86 per cent of the population attend mass each Sunday — is fighting the spread of permissiveness from Europe and the United States.

Malta is one of the few countries in the world which operates an official ban on birth control devices, but that doesn't seem to bother the young Maltese.

"Sex before marriage is pretty normal," says Michael Scluna, 28, a clerk. "We know it's against the church, but who cares?"

Until they get married, girls lead a sheltered life. They don't go to pubs or clubs alone, for fear of getting a bad reputation. They're usually at home by 9 p.m. after their two-hour-long Mediterranean-style promenade up and down Valletta's main street, seeing and being seen.

"Once in my life," says Louise Farrugia, "I stayed out until 1 a.m. and, my God, was my father terrible when I got home.

"He wanted to know everything I'd done, where I'd been. I'd only gone with my friends to a party." She is 25, and this happened last year.

Few girls go in for full-time careers. So women's lib, if it planned to move in here, would have to do some hard recruiting work. Girls such as Louise and Elizabeth haven't any plans to burn their bras or chain themselves to the battlements of Valletta's grand harbor.

"Marriage is our only career," says Elizabeth. "All we want is a good husband, a good family and a good home.

"What's the point of taking to the streets to change things? Who could ask for

Special Requests For Woman Caddy

BUFFALO (AP) — One day last January the telephone rang in Jim Eldridge's office and a voice said, "I'm 16, like golf and want to become a caddy."

The head pro at the exclusive Park Country Club in suburban Williamsville replied, "OK, be there at 4:30 May 1 when we start our caddy school."

The day arrived and Eldridge saw Joanne Markiewicz, a five-foot-8½-inch, 135-pounder walk into the office.

"I nearly fell over when she said she was the one who called about the caddy's job," he recalls. "I never dreamed the call was from a girl.

"I was so amazed, I said I'd have to think it over. A couple of days later I told her it still was OK for her to attend caddy school."

Eldridge says Joanne never missed the twice-a-week sessions throughout May.

"Joanne learned quickly and well all the things a good caddy must know and do," Eldridge says.

"This includes raking traps after sand shots, attending the flag, watching the ball in flight and where it lands, taking care not to step on the putting line of the golfer on the green, promptness in handing over the right club and washing the golf ball when needed."

Joanne passed her tests with flying colors. When she toted her first 30-pound bag of clubs she was paid $4 for an 18-hole round.

"There's nothing boring about caddying," Joanne says. "And there's nothing unusual about girl caddies — they have them in Japan and France."

Some of the Park Club members asked, "What's that girl doing over there?" when they first spotted Joanne on the caddy bench awaiting a call.

Later, the question to caddymaster Butch Davies became:

"May I have that girl to caddy? I hear she's very good."

Pakistani Strife Not Choosey Over Its Victims

AGARTALA, India (AP) — The civil strife in East Pakistan claims its victims without discrimination—Hindus and Moslems, men and women, the elderly and the new-born.

A nine-day-old orphan—his mother was killed two days earlier—dies of a head wound in an overcrowded hospital in this Indian border city in remote Tripura state. He had been carried out of East Pakistan by his grandfather, who said the Pakistan army had attacked their village in neighboring Comilla district.

The baby's mother, also struck in the head, had died on the spot.

In another ward, seven-year-old Babul Mia sits on the floor —no beds are available—next to his younger brother who is recovering from a bullet wound in the leg. Babul is now head of his family. His parents died in the Myeminsingh district of East Pakistan.

Fulchand Bibi, 30, stands at the edge of a refugee camp on the Indian border and stares toward East Pakistan, her four children, ranging from four months to six years, clinging to her. She starts weeping.

A friend says her husband was killed four days earlier when he went back to his farm a mile inside East Pakistan to harvest the rice crop he had planted in February—when there was peace.

Fulchand's husband, a Moslem, was typical of many East Pakistani farmers who fled from border villages to safety in India when the Pakistan army destroyed their thatched huts while searching for members of the Mukti Fouj—Liberation forces—battling for an independent Bengali nation in East Pakistan.

He had lost his home, but he tried to save his crop. Instead he lost his life.

The number of orphans and widows is rising so rapidly—it is estimated to be in the tens of thousands, although accurate statistics are not available—that Indian government officials are planning to set up special rehabilitation camps for them.

The Indian government says there now are seven million refugees, and the number is growing each day by about 40,000—mainly Hindus crossing into India's West Bengal state after 200-mile treks from the East Pakistan interior. Previously, most refugees had come from villages along the 1,349-mile border with India.

Officials estimate that 85 per cent of the refugees are Hindus, the minority community in Pakistan, but a sizable number—about 1.1 million—are Moslems.

Convict Committees To Ease Tensions

OTTAWA (CP) — Wardens of 32 federal prisons have been directed to allow prisoners to elect committees "to improve co-operation with management."

The committees of prisoners, elected by secret ballot, will have neither decision-making authority nor administrative power, but are expected to bring about change within the institutions, said the announcement Tuesday by Solicitor-General Jean-Pierre Goyer.

Their primary purpose will be to "open up better communications between staff and inmates."

They will also make suggestions on treatment and training programs, acting as an escape valve for the tensions that build up in penitentiaries.

Spokesmen here say a raft of directives is going out from Penitentiaries' Commissioner Paul Faguy aimed at "humanizing the whole system." They involve everything from rules on correspondence to visiting privileges.

FRUSTRATIONS

"These are the things they complain about," an official says of the 7,000 federal prisoners, whose frustrations have been vented in several institutions in recent months.

The most notable disturbance occurred in April at Kingston penitentiary, where guards were held hostage while a committee of prisoners carried grievances outside.

One factor said to have led to the Kingston riot was fear among prisoners of the kind of life they would lead when transferred to Millhaven, a new maximum security prison 18 miles away. Rumors of round-the-clock surveillance of electronic eyes, which don't exist at Millhaven, were mentioned.

Prison disturbances traditionally have been associated with the "little" things, such as an unvaried menu, unexplained changes in routine.

"We recognize that committees of prisoners elected by the inmate population can provide a vital communications link between the inmate body and the prison population," Goyer said in a news release.

TWICE A YEAR

Under Faguy's directive, effective Aug. 1, the committees would work with the administration on treatment and training programs, recreation, privileges, and community service projects.

They would be elected twice a year, since the turnover in prison population is high because of releases and admissions. Meetings would be once a month, with recommendations and suggestions being forwarded to the wardens.

The inmate representative would be responsible for informing the group he represents — a cell block, for instance — of proceedings. And minutes would be tacked on notice boards.

Recently the penitentiaries service announced that leisure clothes will be provided for prisoners and work clothes will be of better material, with the numbers on the inside rather than the outside.

NO CENSORSHIP

After the matter was raised in Parliament, Goyer ordered that letters to himself or members of Parliament from prisoners no longer be censored by prison officials.

Both Goyer, who became solicitor-general last December, and Faguy, penitentiaries commissioner since last September, have been pushing the program to "humanize" the prisons, where some rules predate Confederation and a stifling military atmosphere can still be found.

Riel Sketch By Mayor Angers Metis

SASKATOON (CP) — The Metis Society of Saskatchewan has asked Saskatoon Mayor Sid Buckwold for a public apology for his take-off of Metis leader Louis Riel Friday night.

"It is a good example of white philosophy," Bruce Flamont, administrator for the society, said Tuesday. "... Whitey goes around figuring he is the greatest and anyone else is to be used for fun and profit."

At a civic reception Friday, Buckwold emerged from a coffin with a noose around his neck and recited a poem, the gist of which was that Riel would have died happier if he had been hanged in Saskatoon instead of Regina. The reception was for representatives of Regina's summer exhibition.

Flamont said the skit was an answer "to these people who ask what racism or white supremist ignorance is."

The society has tried hard to build up native people's history and expose lies built up during the past 100 years, he said.

"Louis Riel is a major fact of our history, both Indian and Metis. He was brutally murdered for the simple reason his people wanted freedom from oppression and greed."

Riel was hanged in 1885 for leading Metis and Indians in a rebellion over land rights.

Buckwold was not available for comment.

GUERRILLA CRACKDOWN COMPLETE

Fellow Arabs Outraged by Hussein

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The Arab chorus of outrage at Jordan's suppression of the Palestinian Arab guerrillas mounted today, but King Hussein appeared to have eliminated, for the time being at least, the commandos' threat to his throne.

Egypt endorsed Libya's call for an Arab summit meeting to support the guerrillas, announcing that President Anwar Sadat was sending a personal envoy to Damascus with the foreign minister of Saudi Arabia to confer with Syrian President Hafez Assad.

Syria charged the Jordanians with shelling Syrian border posts. Radio Damascus said Syria would "take whatever measures are needed to support the Palestinian commando movement."

Iraq, which closed its border with Jordan early this week and ordered its ambassador home from Ammas, asked Hussein to withdraw his ambassador from Baghdad.

Kuwait and Lebanon welcomed Libya's all for an arab summit, as did guerrilla chieftain Yasser Arafat, directing what appeared to be his forces' last stand in Jordan from the Syrian border town of Deraa. The guerrilla radio in Baghdad said much more than a summit conference was needed.

Saudi Arabia was an exception to the angry outcries. Amman Radio said the oil kingdom had paid the Jordanian government $9.6 million Tuesday as part of the annual subsidy king Faisal has made to Jordan since the 1967 Middle East war.

Hussein's government reacted to the mounting criticism by declaring that two agreements regulating relations between the Jordanian army and the guerrillas were still valid. Jordan had renounced them two days earlier.

The agreements, reached after the army's first crackdown on the commandos last September, set forth terms of oexistence so that the guerrillas could continue to operate against Israel from bases in Jordan.

BOSTON — A lawyer representing cartoonist Al Capp said Tuesday the creator of Li'l Abner will surrender voluntarily in Wisconsin to answer morals charges filed against him in Eau Claire.

A warrant for the arrest of Alfred Gerald Caplin, the cartoonist's legal name, was issued in May at Eau Claire. It charged sodomy, attempted adultery and indecent exposure. Capp denied the charges, which Wisconsin police said were made by a married college co-ed.

SPACE CENTRE, Houston — Apollo 15 astronauts named their command ship Endeavour after the ship James Cook sailed from England in 1768 on the first purely scientific expedition to the South Pacific.

"Since we feel that our comand-service module is setting sail across the sea of space for the first purely scientific mission for that vehicle, we felt we should probably choose the name that James Cook chose," said David R. Scott, the mission commander.

For the lunar module, the astronauts selected the name Falcon because Scott, Alfred M. Worden and James B. Irwin are air force officers and Falcon is the air force mascot.

LONDON — Actor Laurence Olivier made his maiden speech Tuesday night in the House of Lords, his first since being created a life peer two years ago, to defend an amendment concerning actors in an industrial relations bill.

As befits his calling, Lord Olivier spoke with Shakespearean flair. His fellow lords applauded him warmly and then voted to defeat the amendment he had supported, 102-86.

VANCOUVER — the father of a boy who drowned in Vancouver's Trout Lake told an inquest Tuesday into his son's death that three lifeguards on duty "didn't even get their pants wet" while his son drowned.

Andrew Kevner, father of 12-year-old Neil Kevener who drowned last Thursday, made the charge.

The three lifeguards said they were about to search under a raft when the boy came to the surface. They said he was given heart massage and other revival treatment but failed to respond.

QUESNEL, B.C. — Gordon Joseph Reed, 39, of Vancouver, who claimed he was lost in rugged mountain country between Quesnel and McBride for 20 days, pleaded guilty Tuesday to charges of auto theft and break and enter.

Reed had said he was trapped by a snowslide while on a hike in the McBride area June 19. He was found by canoeists 20 days later in the Bowron Lakes area in a state of near starvation.

But RCMP had a different story. They said he had taken a car in McBride on June 19, driven it 30 miles and then abandoned it. They said he broke into a cabin, stole some food and then vanished into the bush.

Reed, who spent some time in hospital recovering, was remanded a week for a presentence report.

LOS ANGELES — Francis Gary Powers, the American U-2 spy-plane pilot shot down over the Soviet Union in 1960, has a new job — a skywatch traffic reporter for a radio station, observing freeway congestion from a single-engined plane.

Powers, 41, was hired this week by station KGIL as a vacation replacement pilot, flying a Cessna over the Los Angeles freeway system and radioing live reports on the traffic conditions.

He was laid off last year as a research pilot for Lockheed Aircraft, manufacturer of the U-2.

MOMENT OF CONFRONTATION in the robust comedy, Room Service, features Mary Anne MacNeill, a student from University of Victoria theatre department, and Graham McPherson of Calgary. A Broadway hit of the 30s, it has been revived by Ralph Allen as part of the Victoria Fair 71 repertory at McPherson Playhouse, where it opens Thursday at 8 p.m. It will run in repertory through Labor Day weekend with A Trip Abroad and Justice Not Revenge, the Spanish tragedy, due to open on Aug. 3.

Water Rationing?

CALGARY (CP)—City administrators appealed to residents Tuesday to cut water consumption or face rations for the first time in eight years. As the temperature rose to the mid-80s Monday, water consumption increased to 120 million gallons and left no reserve water or equipment to handle emergencies such as fires or line breaks.

Police Power

WINNIPEG (CP) — Manitoba Labor Minister A. R. Paulley says a bill which removes prohibition against police going on strike should not be construed as a suggestion by him "to police or any other association that they should go out on strike." Mr. Paulley made the comment Tuesday in introducing a bill amending the Labor Relations Act for second reading in the legislature.

Pioneer Dies

REGINA (CP)—Funeral services for Louis A. Thornton, 91, first chairman of the Saskatchewan Power Commission and a city commissioner for 16 years were to be held today. Mr. Thornton, who died Monday, was born in Kingston, Ont., and began to make his name as one of Saskatchewan's outstanding citizens in 1906 when he became resident engineer at the traffic bridge in Saskatoon.

Army Uses Big Stick in East Pakistan

By SYDNEY H. SCHANBERG

NEW DELHI (NYT) — Army trucks roll through the half-deserted streets of Dacca, capital of East Pakistan, these days, carrying "antistate" prisoners to worksites for hard labor. Their heads are shaved and they wear shoes and no clothes except for shorts — all of which makes escape difficult.

Every day the Dacca Airport planes from West Pakistan, more than 1,000 miles away across India, land troops dressed in baggy pajama-like tribal clothing so as to be less conspicious.

Street names are being changed to do away with all Hindu names as well as those of Bengali Moslem nationalists as part of the campaign to stamp out the Bengali culture. Shankari Bazar Road in Dacca is now Tikka Khan Road, after the Lieutenant General who is the martial-law Governor of East Pakistan and whom most Bengalis call "the butcher."

Those are just a few of the numerous things seen by this correspondent during a recent visit to Pakistan's eastern province, that indicate that the military regime there is determined to make its occupation stick and to maintain its control of the region and its 75 million people.

The government is doing this despite the region's crippled economy, the collapse of government administration, an intensifying guerrilla activity by Bengali separatists, mounting army casualties and alienated, sullen population.

To insure troop strength in East Pakistan, the government has leased two Boeing 707's from a private Irish-owned charter airline, World Airways, to carry reinforcements for its Army there — estimated now at between 70,000 and 80,000 men — and replacements for casualties.

In addition to the daily troop arrivals, the government is bringing in wave upon wave of West Pakistanis to replace East Pakistanis in government jobs. No Bengali is trusted with a responsible or sensitive post; even the man who cuts the grass at the Dacca Airport is a non-Bengali.

Few Bengali taxi drivers remain. Their jobs have been given to non-Bengali Moslem migrants from India such as the Biharis, who have always identified and sided with the West Pakistani-dominated government and who are serving as the army's civilian arm.

The West Pakistanis are discouraging the use of the Bengali language and trying to replace it with their own, Urdu. The soldiers tell the Bengalis disdainfully that their language is not really a civilized tongue and that they should start teaching their children Urdu if they want to get along. Merchants, out of fear, have replaced their signs with signs in English because they do not know Urdu.

Throughout East Pakistan the Army is training new para-military home guards or simply arming "loyal" civilians, some of whom are formed into "peace committees." Besides Biharis and other non-Bengali, Urdu-speaking Moslems, the recruits include the small minority of Bingali Moslems who have long supported the army — adherents of the right-wing religious parties such as the Moslem league and Jamaat-e-Islami.

Since the army offensive began, West Pakistani troops have killed countless thousands of Bengalis — foreign diplomates estimate at least 200,000 or 250,000 — many in massacres. Although at first the targets were both Moslems and the 10-million Hindus, the Army is now concentrating on the Hindus in what foreign observers characterize as a holy war.

West Pakistani leaders have long considered the Hindus as subverters of Islam. They now view them as agents of Hindu India, which has been accused of engineering the autonomy movement to bring about Pakistan's disintegration.

Ready to carry out the Family's wishes quietly, sympathetically, with efficiency and dignity.

Political Storm Over—Now Comes Economic Woe

By BRIAN WILLIAMS

PHNOM PENH (Reuter) — Weathering both political and military crises in recent months, Cambodia still faces major economic woes and the problem of preventing increasing alienation of this capital from the countryside.

There are some grounds for confidence following the solution of an 18-day cabinet crisis in May, which saw the ailing Marshal Lon Nol remain premier but at the head of a reshuffled cabinet, and in the success in June of Cambodian troops against Viet Cong and North Vietnamese soldiers near Phnom Penh.

Indeed, some observers saw the military action as Cambodia's most decisive victory since the Indochina war spilled over into the country in earnest a lite more than a year ago.

But neither event has solved Cambodia's economic problems. The country seems destined merely to stagger along until the whole Indochina question is settled.

The compromise cabinet formed under Lon Nol and in effect led, until he recovers from a stroke by his deputy Sisowath Sirik Matak, has settled into what can only be described as a caretaker role.

MAINTAINS BALANCE

It has promulgated no new significant laws. It appears unwilling to upset the tenuous balance that has enabled Cambodia to survive since the overthrow of Prince Norodom Sihanouk as head of state and his move to Peking early last year.

However, there is growing concern among some government members about the alienation of Phnom Penh from people in the rural areas.

The Viet Cong and North Vietnamese have succeeded in cutting all but one of Cambodia's main highways and sealed the capital from the problems of the villagers.

Under Sihanouk, the villagers had an identifiable link through the royalty with its Buddhist religious implications. And Lon Nol, before the stroke that partially paralysed him earlier this year, managed to maintain some of this by force of his own personality.

Some hope is expressed here that the marshal may have recovered sufficiently to re-establish this link in the near future —of vital importance if Phnom Penh is to maintain control.

The political and economic stresses for the present do not appear to have badly affected the ordinary Cambodian soldier. He still whistles as he goes off to battle on top of battered buses, apparently convinced he is winning the war.

DECISIVE VICTORY

This spirit was reflected in a recent vital battle. The Cambodians, ill-equipped and short on training, took on top North Vietnamese troops only a dozen miles from the capital, and won a resounding victory.

But the problem is tremendous. The Cambodian high command reported at the beginning of July that 10,000 North Vietnamese infiltrated into the country in June alone. A spokesman put the total North Vietnamese strength in Cambodia at 60,000.

On the home front, the price of rice has quadrupled in the last year. Soldiers have taken to ordering meals in restaurants on credit, supported by cocked rifles.

The main victims of such tactics have been local Chinese businessmen, who have a big hold on the economy. As a result, there has been a flight of funds from Cambodia, aggravating an already serious situation.

Cambodians seem to believe at present that their only chance is to carry on as best they can by their own efforts. Every government announcement stresses Cambodia's neutrality and a desire for peace in the country.

But Cambodians are wondering how long they can stagger along towards this goal.

DRUG BURN EDUCATES PUBLICANS

BIRMINGHAM (CP) — Police detectives burnt lumps of cannabis in front of a group of publicans as part of a campaign to curb drug abuse in pubs. The demonstration, to familiarize publicans with "the sweet smell of marijuana", was organized by Midlands licensing magistrates. "We are concerned about drug trafficking in pubs frequented by youngsters," said Robert Price, chairman of the licensing committee.

Forgetful Samaritan?

EDMONTON (CP) — Was he a scoundrel or a forgetful good samaritan?

David McGuire, an information officer for the Canadian Mental Health Association, keeps asking himself that question but can't find an answer.

Three weeks ago the association made a public plea for electrical appliances and camping equipment. An unidentified man quickly volunteered his services as a delivery man and picked up a television set, a record player, records, sleeping bags and clothing.

He hasn't been heard from since.

The Lord is my shepherd: I shall not want.

He maketh me to lie down in green pastures: He leadeth me beside the still waters.

He restoreth my soul: He leadeth me in the paths of righteousness for His name's sake.

Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil: for thou art with me; thy rod and thy staff they comfort me.

Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies: thou anointest my head with oil; my cup runneth over.

Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life: and I will dwell in the house of the Lord for ever.

ROBINSON'S for BICYCLES Serving

YOUR HEALTH: Dr. Walter Alvarez

Of late, more and more screening programs are being used to help to detect certain diseases in people who may not even suspect that there is anything wrong with them. I just read in a release from the Disease Detection Information Bureau that last year in Vermont the health department screened 3,609 persons for diabetes, and 68 persons were found to have it.

Of 2,087 persons screened in 1970 for glaucoma, a serious disease of the eyes which tends to run in families and tends to come in older people, there were 53 with abnormal eyeball pressures, and in follow-up studies 21 were found to have definite glaucoma. One reason why such screening is so important is that glaucoma tends to "creep up" on its victim without his realizing soon enough that something is wrong. By the time he notices that he is not seeing well enough and goes to a doctor, the disease has often done serious damage to the eyes which cannot be cleared away.

Anyone, especially if he is over 40 or if he knows that someone in his family has glaucoma, should be on the watch for the danger signals: frequent changes of glasses, none satisfactory; inability to adjust the eyes to darkened rooms, such as theatres; loss of side vision; blurred or foggy vision or rainbow-colored rings around lights.

Glaucoma comes when more fluid goes into the eyeball than goes out. This greatly increases the internal pressure, producing tension in the eyeball. The increased tension pressing on the retina (the seeing part of the eye) can eventually cause blindness.

Nowadays, the tension or fluid pressure in the eyeball is measured in the ophthalmologist's office with a tiny metal scale, called a tonometer. There are certain eye drops that can frequently control the situation if they are taken regularly. If they do not work, an operation may have to be performed. The greatest help in treating glaucoma is early detection of the disease.

Diabetes is another disease in which early detection can be very important in preventing or cutting down on the damage it does to the body. Anyone, and especially a person who knows there is diabeter in his family, should watch out for suspicious symptoms such as excessive hunger and thirst with frequent and copious urination, loss of weight, itching of the skin and perhaps crops of boils. Any child who, after learning to keep his bed dry, at night, goes back to wetting it, may be a diabetic.

In the screening programs mentioned, public health nurses played a valuable role. After the persons with suspicion of disease were found, the nurses made sure that each person followed up the tests with a visit to a physician; they also gave these persons information about diabetes or glaucoma.

Wilson Urges Debate To Heal Party Splits

By KEVIN DOYLE

LONDON (CP) — Labor Leader Harold Wilson, acknowledging chaotic divisions in his party over proposed British membership in the European Common Market, pleaded Tuesday for a return to orderly debate.

But some commentators suggested today the party may already be too deeply split for any immediate reconciliation of opposing forces. Some newspapers said Wilson may be considering resignation.

Basically, the party is divided between those arguing that entry terms negotiated by the Conservative government are the best now possible and others — including Wilson himself—who denounce the terms.

A Commons debate on Market entry opens today although a formal parliamentary vote will not be taken until October.

The opposition leader told a meeting of Labor MPs the party was on the brink of disaster. In unusually tough language, he called for an end to "petty, destructive in-fighting."

The Daily Telegraph saw the speech as a "savage attack on Labor pro-marketeers," while The Daily Express considered it a threat by Wilson to resign unless party wounds can be healed quickly.

The internal squabbling began in earnest last Saturday when Wilson strongly criticized entry terms during a major speech to a party convention held to discuss the Market issue.

The debate intensified Monday with a strongly pro-Market speech by Labor's deputy leader, Roy Jenkins, which some observers considered a fairly pointed attack on Wilson's still unofficial opposition to Market entry.

Referring to the meeting at which Jenkins spoke, Wilson said:

"Some were not outside the door last (Monday) night before the knives were out, hatchets disinterred, the invocations to retaliation heard.

"Last night was not the first sortie. Last Saturday, before I spoke at conference, some members of this party had obtained, by means of which they cannot be proud, a coup . . . of my speech and were denouncing to Conservative newspapers in abusive terms."

WILSON 'SURPRISED'

"I am surprised that any of those good colleagues can find it in their hearts to sully their purity by continuing to sit on the front bench at my invitation."

Wilson is to officially declare his position on the Market question later this month after a meeting of the party executive.

He said he is not remaining in the leadership position simply out of personal ambition but because of a sense of duty to the party.

The Telegraph commented: "At a really fateful moment Mr. Wilson has been found unpardonably wanting. It is not a question of honest doubt about entering the Common Market but of sacrificing for party-political reasons . . . what had previously been pursued . . . as a vital national interest."

The Times said Wilson's remarks demonstrated "how seriously split the . . . Labor party is after Mr. Jenkins's speech.

The Daily Express said Wilson had torn open "the quarrel in the Labor party still further." The Guardian and The Daily Mail said Wilsons speech indicates he is prepared to resign if he cannot restore party unity.

Regional Takeover Of Family Service Called Tragic Step

The executive director of the Family and Children's Service, Gordon Wright, said Tuesday he has "no interest" in being part of the administrative structure of a proposed amalgamated social services agency under the Capital Regional District.

But Wright added he might stay on a counsellor for a while.

He made the comment during a press conference at which Family and Children's Service officials repeated opposition to the planned regionalization and suggested the F and CS structure be used as a basis for a merger.

OTHER THINGS

"There are other things in this world you can do," he said. "I'm sure they'll find people who are (willing)."

Wright disclosed at the press conference that the agency will meet the social services committee of the Capital Regional District today for the first time.

He said previous requests for a meeting to discuss changes in social services structures met with no reply. Asked if F and CS was being ignored, he said "of course."

Under the proposed amalgamation or "regionalization" of social services, the city, Saanich and provincial welfare offices would join F and CS services under a single body.

Walter Cownden, president of the board of directors of F and CS, said he feels there are some responsibilities within a community which should "not merely burden elected or appointed people" but which should draw on citizen participation.

'TRAGIC STEP'

"To destroy the Family and Children's Service ... is a tragic, retrograde step and one that will take years to overcome," he said.

"We don't feel the regional board is going to have time, interest or dedication to properly administer social services for the region. They have many other duties and there will be more to come."

Wright, discussing an alternative by expanding F and CS, said ideally the board would be directly elected from the public, although councils might be asked to make appointments.

Cownden said F and CS officials met Rehabilitation Minister P. A. Gaglardi Monday. He said "no plan will be implemented without his say-so."

Family and Children's Service operates as a children's aid society, family service agency, established the foster parent association and handles child protection, family and marriage counselling, day care services for unmarried parents and adoption services.

Cownden said the proposal being considered by local councils and the provincial government could result in a deterioration in the quality of service, reduced efficiency, increase in costs and discontent among staff.

'NO SENSE'

"It makes no sense whatever casually to scrap systems and procedures developed out of the experience of 76 years and substitute new systems and procedures which are completely untried and unproven," he said.

Material provided at the press conference said a feasibility study last year on regional social services did not consider the views of the users of the services "and the study carefully avoided consideration of all questions of service quality."

The material also stated that the proposed structure involves decentralization.

"The fact, however, that most troubled families have economic problems and tend to live in the cheapest possible accommodation means that aproximately four-fifths of these field offices, together presumably with the central administrative office, will be located within a circle of three-mile radius from the Victoria city centre," the material stated.

F and CS argued for a single central office with specific neighborhoods of high need.

"This is precisely the pattern developed by Family and Children's Service over the last five years and is of proven effectiveness," the agency said.

Visitor Pinned Between Cars

A California visitor is in good condition in St. Joseph's Hospital today with a broken leg he received when he was pinned between two carsr lined up at the CPR wharf.

Police said Leesun B. Daniel was standing behind his car in the line to the ferry about 4:15 p.m. Tuesday when another vehicle trapped him between the cars.

Police said the other driver, Barry Kerr of Winnipeg, stepped on the gas pedal rather than the brake of his vehicle while trying to line up behind the Daniel auto.

Decision Soon On Hydro's Pipeline Bid

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia Hydro and Power Corp. will make a decision in the next few days on whether it will submit a bid to the provincial government to build a gas pipeline from the mainland to Vancouver Island.

Dr. Gordon Shrum, B.C. Hydro chairman, said Tuesday the provincial power utility has a team of experts studying the problem.

Premier Bennett announced last April that the provincial government wanted a gas pipeline built from Williams Lake to the Island in order to provide fuel for heavy industry and future power generation. He set July 30 as the dealine for proposals.

Several other firms, including two engineering companies, are known to be working on the project, but whether they will bid is not known.

Dr. Shrum said in an interview B.C. Hydro had "a number of ideas about the line."

Among them was the question of where to hook on to the pipeline of Westcoast Transmission Co. Ltd., the B.C. supplier of gas. Price of the gas was also a factor.

Air Cadets To Visit Province

A party of 31 air cadets from the United States and continental Europe will visit British Columbia in early August as part of an exchange program.

In the group will be 15 U.S. cadets, four from France and two each from Norway, Sweden, Holland, Belgium, Switzerland and Spain.

After visiting Vancouver for three days, they will arrive in Victoria Aug. 4, accompanied by four cadet officers and representatives of the B.C. Air Cadet Committee.

Events scheduled here are a tour of the Provincial Museum, a luncheon sponsored by the provincial government, a tour of CFB, Esquimalt and the harbor.

They will be billeted overnight at Work Point Barracks and taken by bus the next day to CFB, Comox.

While at the up-Island base they will be entertained with swimming, fishing and helicopter flights to the Comox Glacier.

They will fly east to Trenton, Ont. Aug. 6.

The western visit is part of a three-week program. At the same time it is taking place Canadian cadets will be visiting countries in Europe, as well as Britain and the United States.

Brooms Add Color to Garden

By HILDA BEASTALL

Spartium junceum is only one of the lovely brooms which add color and fragrance to our summer gardens. This is the so-called Spanish broom, splendid for seaside gardens with its long slender green stems terminating in six to eight inches of huge pea-flowered yellow blooms.

Hilda

All brooms like to grow in rather poor soil well drained for winter; and either full sunshine or nearly full sun will give good results.

The plants are not easy to move once they are growing up. They should be bought in containers of some kind so that you know all the roots are there undisturbed.

You can propagate the Spanish broom (Spartium) from seeds sown as soon as ripe since there is only the one species in the genus and no varieties. The only variation will be in size and quantity of bloom produced on the stems. Or you can take cuttings now, of five-inch unflowered shoots. Set a half-dozen around the edge of a 7-clay pot filled with a mixture of a third each of sand, soil and peat moss.

Keep outdoors in a warm but partly shaded place and as soon as rooting takes place (you can tell by the appearance of the cuttings brightening) pot, or can, separately and keep in a frame for the winter.

Plant out in spring after growth starts, but be sure you don't want to move the plant again.

The colored brooms of the genus Cytisus which have bloomed earlier and are of hybrid origin from Holland can only be propagated from cuttings.

Take shoots four or five inches long of this summer's growth, and insert into pots of sandy mixture as described above.

The percentage of rooting for the home gardener under conditions here set out may be around 60; so if you want two or three new plants of one variety take five cuttings.

Genista delphinensis, which blooms for two or three months on a sunny bank, is a choice species of broom only a couple of inches high, with queer flat little leaves an eighth of an inch wide. A plant will spread over a yard wide in several years, rooting at the stem joints as it goes. Propagation is by the same method.

While the pots must not dry out completely, broom cuttings must never be wet. After rooting, they will take more water, but be sure you pot them singly while roots are still only an inch long.

Cultivated brooms are so ornamental and useful in our dry summers that most gardens will benefit from one in a dry corner.

None of those mentioned spread uncontrollably. Even Spartium junceum will set only a few seeds on a large shrub, so it is rare to find a self-sown seeding nearby.

KARPIN ON BRIDGE

By FRED KARPIN

It has probably been said before (although I have not heard it) that "finesses, like death and taxes, will always be with us." But, unlike death and taxes, finesses can be avoided. Unfortunately, however there will always be those who choose to live by the finesse — and, inevitably, they will perish by the finesse. Today's deal is the case in point. East-West vulnerable. North deals.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♣	Pass	2 NT	Pass
3 NT	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Six of ♠.

Opening lead: Six of spades.

West's opening spade lead was captured by the board's ace, after which the three of diamonds was led. When East followed suit with the seven-spot, South inserted his queen finessing against East's hoped-for king. Upon winning the trick with his diamond king, West returned a spade, which was won by South's king. When declarer next led the diamond ace, East discarded a heart.

Declarer's cause was now lost. His next play was a heart to dummy's queen. After taking the trick with his ace, East played back his remaining spade. As dummy's queen took this trick, West's last two spades were promoted into winners.

Hoping that the six outstanding clubs were divided 3-3, declarer cashed the king, queen, and ace of clubs. When West discarded a heart on the second club lead, declarer was doomed. All he made were three spades, two diamonds, and three clubs.

Actually, declarer was unlucky in running into a 4-1 division of the outstanding diamonds. Had they been divided 3-2, or had East possesed the diamond king, declarer would have made three diamond tricks. But his defeat was strictly of his own making — and should have been ashamed of himself.

After taking the opening spade lead with the board's ace, declarer should have led the queen of hearts. And by continuing hearts when he regained the lead, he would, in routine fashion, establish two heart tricks. Even without ever attacking the diamond suit, he would end up with nine guaranteed tricks: three spades, two hearts, one diamond, and three clubs.

If declarer's actual line of play — the immediate diamond finesse — were to be categorized, it would come under the heading of "Hands where declarer forgot to count his tricks." And no one in the world holds so many good cards that he can afford the luxury of not counting his tricks.

We have 1356 for the game today. Using all four digits each time, one of each and no other digits at all, you form expressions for consecutive numbers from one up.

Any arithmetical signs may be used, but no summation (that's not the simple plus) or factorial symbols. Don't forget decimals, roots and powers (no extra digits). For example, 51 — 6 plus 3 is a solution for 48.

The limit without a break in continuity seems to be 81, and you may find 79 difficult. I shall be glad to check solutions, and will send hints to help in future games if requested.

Millhaven Prisoner Admits He Accused Wrong Guard

NAPANEE, Ont. (CP) — A Millhaven penitentiary prisoner testified Tuesday that he gave police the wrong name of a guard who assaulted him in a prison corridor last April.

Robert Walter said he had been told by another prisoner that the guard's name was Cote. But, he said he made a mistake and had meant to identify a Millhaven guard he now knows by the name of Midland.

Walters was testifying at the preliminary hearing of Paul Joseph Cote, charged with committing common assault on the 19-year-old convict. Assault charges are being heard against 11 other guards at the same preliminary hearing.

Judge Donald Graham ruled Tuesday in favor of a defence motion that the proceedings, which began as a trial Monday, now be considered a preliminary hearing.

At the request of the defence lawyer, the judge ordered a ban on the publication of all evidence until the accused are discharged or until the conclusion of their trial.

Evidence on the charge against Cote of assaulting Walters was allowed, however, because Cote was discharged. Judge Graham quashed the charge against the guard, who still faces a common assault charge in connection with the beating of another prisoner.

Walters testified that he was beaten by guards with riot sticks as he was being admitted to Millhaven, a new maximum security institution about 20 miles west of Kingston. He was one of many prisoners transferred by bus to Millhaven at the end of a four-day riot in April in the Kingston penitentiary.

He said a guard grabbed him by the arm, called him names, threw him against a wall and hit him with a stick in the stomach and back. But, he said that the guard who attacked him was not in the court and then told of his mistake about the guard's name.

BELGIAN REFORM PACKAGE

Flemish-French Recognized

BRUSSELS (Reuter) — The Senate approved Tuesday the final elements of a far-reaching constitutional reform package that seeks to lay a new basis for relations between Belgium's two feuding language groups.

The reforms give added constitutional recognition to Belgium's division into opposing Flemish- and French-speaking areas, source of the bitter squabble that has dominated Belgian politics for the last two years.

Tuesday's vote endorsed the government's proposals on representation of the two communities on certain local authority bodies and on decentralizing the country's cultural and economic administration.

Political observers said the vote finally averted the threat of an early general election, for Premier Gaston Eyskens had staked the future of his coalition government on successfully steering the reform package through Parliament to lessen friction between the language groups.

The reform package, which sparked bitter controversy when it first appeared, will give Belgium's four main regions—Flanders, Wallonia, Brussels and the German border zone—more say in determining their own cultural and economic affairs. But it stops short of complete federalism.

Until its recent economic expansion, Flanders was the poorer part of Belgium, its inhabitants dominated culturally and economically by their French-speaking countrymen.

But a post-war industrial boom in centres like Antwerp and Ghent has coincided with the decline of the coal-based economy of French-speaking Belgium, and has given Flemings who are in the national majority a new awareness of their powers and rights.

Girl Charges Racism In Murder Hearing

SAN RAFAEL, Calif. (AP) — Black revolutionary Angela Davis and her chief defence counsel walked out of a pretrial courtroom hearing tuesday protesting what they called racist remarks by a state prosecutor.

The 27-year-old avowed communist and Howard Moore jr. received permission from the judge for the walkout.

Moore told Superior Court Judge Richard E. Arnason he refused to listen to Deputy Attorney-General Cliff Thompson's statements.

Asked if she objected, Miss Davis replied: "I'd like to leave myself."

Arnason gave them permission to listen to the proceedings over a speaker in an adjoining cell.

Miss Davie's lawyers had asked the judge to grant a hearing on her motion that the indictment be dismissed on the grounds it was returned by a racially-prejudiced grand jury selected unfairly.

He took the request under submission and said he would rule later.

Miss Davis and San Quentin convict Ruchell Magee were indicted on charges of murder, kidnap and conspiracy in the Aug. 7 shootout in which Judge Harold J. Haley and three of his abductors were slain. Magee was wounded.

She is accused of providing the guns smuggled into Haley's courtroom in an abortive escape try, and with helping plot the crime.

Books Go South

When the Australian troop carrier HMAS Sydney heads south after taking part in this week's naval assembly she will have two tons of books aboard, to be distributed in the South Pacific area.

Collected by the Ranfurly Library Committee of the English Speaking Union's local branch, the books will go first to Sydney.

From there they will be taken to New Ireland, British Solomon Islands and Sarawak. Books will also be left at Suva, Fiji, for the new University of the Pacific.

CHOU SEEKS RETREAT BEFORE TALKS

FIRST BABY to be born in British Columbia on Centennial Day is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Lorne Cunningham, 26 Helmcken, posing with his mother at the Royal Jubilee Hospital. The seven pound seven ounce boy was born eight minutes after midnight Tuesday and is one of at least 11 babies whose parents will receive 100 silver dollars to mark their child's birth within 71 minutes of the province's 100th birthday. Also born at RJH, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Roy, 171 Bushby, barely made the 71-minute deadline, arriving on the dot of 1 a.m.

Taiwan Support May End

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. Senate Foreign Relations Committee voted today to repeal a resolution of congressional backing for use of U.S. forces to protect Taiwan.

The so-called Formosa Resolution was approved by Congress Jan. 29, 1955, at a time of Red Chinese pressure on the nationalist-held islands off the Chinese mainland, including Taiwan (also known as Formosa) and the Pescadores.

Chiang Kai-shek set up a Nationalist Chinese government on Taiwan after the Communists won the mainland.

Repeal of the resolution was proposed by Sens. Frank Church (D—Idaho) and Charles McC. Mathias (R—Md.).

NEUTRAL STAND

The state department took a neutral position on the question of repeal of the resolution which gave no grant of actual power to the president but served to back his hand in dealing with a crisis.

The repeal was introduced more than a year ago at the same time as the start of an effort which culminated in repeal of the Gulf of Tonkin Resolution on Vietnam.

The committee chairman, Sen. J. William Fulbright (D—Ark.), told reporters the committee action today was not directly related to President Nixon's planned visit to Peking, but conceded that the timing was not altogether a coincidence, either.

LONDON (AP) — Parliament opened debate on the European Common Market today with Conservative Prime Minister Edward Heath urging entry and Opposition Labor Leader Harold Wilson criticizing the terms.

Air Canada said it planned to operate all flights in and out of the city as usual.

"We feel we can do it this time," a spokesman said.

Quit Asia, Nixon Told

By JOHN BURNS
Special to The Times

PEKING — Premier Chou En-Lai has made it emphatically clear that China's interest in normalization of relations with the United States will not be pursued at the cost of China's allies in Indochina.

In a three and a half hour encounter with a group of American students this week the premier declared that a complete withdrawal of U.S. forces from Indochina must take priority over the search for improved Sino-American relations.

'Greatest Cry' for Withdrawal

Speaking in the general context of his invitation to President Richard Nixon to visit Peking, Premier Chou said the "greatest cry" of public opinion, both in the U.S. and elsewhere, is for the U.S. adminstration to withdraw its forces from Indochina.

"It might also be said that this demand is even stronger than the demand to restore the relations between the Chinese and American peoples, because the people of the United States do not want to sacrifice the lives of the American people in this dirty war. Isn't this so?" the premier said.

"Therefore we believe the question to be solved first should be the question of Indochina and by doing so we will be satisfying not only the interests of the Indochinese people but also the people of the United States," he added.

All of Indochina Included

In his remarks on the war, Mr. Chou made it clear that the demand for U.S. withdrawal went beyond Vietnam to "all of Indochina" — Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia. Moreover it covered "not only troops, but all military forces and all military installations."

In so defining the demand the premier appeared to go beyond the seven-point peace proposal made at the Paris peace conference on July 1st by negotiators for the National Liberation Front. A key aspect of the NLF proposals was that they specified a U.S. withdrawal only from Vietnam.

However, Mr. Chou made it clear that China stands by the support it has voiced through its official press for the NLF proposals. The proposals were "the only way to solve the problem" and enjoyed "our complete support," he said.

One of Four Obstacles

Earlier Chou cited the war in Indochina as one of four "obstacles" standing in the way of a normalization of Sino-American relations. He gave the others as the United States commitment to Taiwan, the situation in Korea and the revival of Japanese militarism.

The premier's remarks were conveyed to correspondents in Peking by spokesmen for the friendship delegation of the committee of concerned Asia scholars, a 15-member group which has been touring China for nearly four weeks. Before meeting with the correspondents the group checked their notes against a taped transcript of their conversation with Mr. Chou. In addition they won clearance from the Chinese foreign ministry for the wider circulation of his remarks.

Outspoken Opposition Policy

The scholars' group was founded three years ago and claims a membership of about 5,000, most on campuses in the United States. It has a policy of outspoken opposition to U.S. military involvement in Indochina. It also opposes the U.S. policy on Taiwan.

The delegation's meeting with Chou took place in the Great Hall of The People, in the same room in which Chou greeted members of the U.S. ping pong team during their landmark visit to China three months ago.

Apart from journalists, the scholars are the first large group of Americans to visit China since the ping pong team.

The premier said: "The governments of the two countries should bear the main responsibility for the normalizing of relations between the two countries and the restoration of their relations.

"Now, in the present day, in contracting your government to normalize relations we must contact those who are in authority in your country at present."

Tourists Jam Ferries

Ideal weather and the height of the tourist season are combining to produce traffic jams at B.C. Ferries terminals, particularly on the mainland side.

The company reported today delays of more than an hour at Tsawwassen, with many cars having to wait for a second ship.

At Swartz Bay, the terminal agent says "hardly any" cars are being left behind to wait for the next ferry.

Five ships are in operation on the run, with departures every hour on the hour from both sides, from 7 a.m. to 10 p.m.

B.C. Ferries operates more than 20 ferries around the island and to the mainland.

Tank 'Shoots Through the Air'

KAMLOOPS, B.C. (CP) — A burning propane tank car shot through the air like a skyrocket early today when a dynamite charge was used in an effort to ease gas pressure at the scene of a massive CNR derailment 16 miles northeast of here.

A CNR official at the scene said that apparently too much dynamite was used in the operation.

The plan was to blow a four-inch hole in the end of the tanker to ease pressure and reduce the chances of an explosion—allowing work crews to build bypass tracks around the wreck which has blocked the CNR mainline near Vinsulla, B.C., since Monday.

But the charge blew a fourfoot hole in the car and it went shooting through the air for 300 feet, struck the ground and bounced a further 1,200 feet.

The tanker shot over four big bulldozers parked at the scene without touching them.

There were no injuries. Workers had been cleared from the area for the blast.

Following the fireworks, the last remaining fires at the scene were extinguished.

More than 100 men worked this morning to build the bypass. Estimates of when the mainline would be opened for traffic ranged from 4 p.m. today to 9 a.m. Thursday.

The cause of Monday's derailment still was not known. A CNR spokesman said "the answer might be under that pile of boxcars," but added that once regular traffic resumes it may be several weeks before crews can remove the remains of about 50 cars destroyed in the crash.

Another railway official said the cost of the damage had not been estimated in detail, but likely would be more than $2 million.

Meantime, experts were trying to determine the extent of damage to area farms resulting from spilled sulphur and thick sulphur fumes that belched from the wreck for more than a day.

Residents of the communities of Vinsulla and Raleigh, north of Kamloops, reported the sulphur fumes were ruining gardens and alfalfa crops.

CHECK FOOD

Dr. Hugh M. Richards, medical health officer for the south central region, warned them not to eat fresh fruit or vegetables showing signs of deterioration.

Sixty-five cars of a 94-car westbound freight were derailed on a flat stretch of farmland 16 miles northeast of Kamloops Monday. Two propane cars exploded, sending freight cars flying and spreading sulphur, lumber and other cargo into the fields.

Another two propane tankers blew up later and flames and heavy sulphur smoke belched from the wreckage through the night.

No one was injured.

The propane car was the last big obstacle in the way of crews trying to put down temporary track around the scorched wreckage. Three others survived, soot-blackened, and were hauled to safety Tuesday night.

The bypass, known as a shoofly, should be completed today. It will allow the railway to handle a backlog of 30 freight trains jamming sidings and marshalling yards in British Columbia and Alberta.

CNR freight was partially rerouted along CP Rail lines through Calgary Tuesday and along Pacific Great Eastern tracks to northern B.C. About 2,400 passengers were flown

HEROIN TRAFFIC JOINS TOP TEN

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Province says heroin trafficking rates as one of British Columbia's top 10 industries with annual sales estimated at $160 million.

The newspaper said street sales of the addictive drug represent five per cent of the province's entire retail sales output of $3.1 billion.

Estimates were made in consultation with police and the provincial Narcotic Addiction Foundation, based on an estimate of 10,000 heroin addicts made public last week by the B.C. Medical Association.

Of the 10,000 addicts, about 2,000 are known to be "older generation" addicts, using between five and eight capsules of heroin a day. Using the five-cap figure, these addicts consume about 10,000 caps a day.

The remaining "younger generation" addicts use between two and three caps a day each. Using the two-cap figure new addicts probably need a total 16,000 caps a day.

COST $15 A CAP

The average street price for one cap in Vancouver is $15.

This means that the 26,000 caps of heroin—about 2½ pounds needed every day in B.C.—is worth about $440,000 retail daily of $160.6 million annually.

Most of the heoin used in B.C. is called European white and comes mostly from the south of France, where opium grown in Turkey is made into morphine base and then heroin.

A ilogram of heroin is worth up to $750 at source, between $25,000 and $50,000 after being processed in Europe and between five and 0 times that much when it rtaches the market in B.C.

There are 35.2 ounces in a kilogram and 400 to 600 capsules to an ounce, depending on dilution.

ABOUT PEOPLE

The Happy Breed Of Garbage Men

You meet such interesting people in the newspaper business — Old Cliche.

★ ★ ★

If I learned anything at all in several years of prowling the globe in search of news — and sometimes I wonder — it is that the happiest workers of the world are garbage collectors.

From the boisterous dustmen of Britain to the ribald basuradors of Buenos Aires they are, without exception, a marvellously, mysteriously happy-go-lucky breed.

Well, there I was, sharing my wee lunch-time sandwich with the gulls at Clover Point, when the City of Victoria garbage truck No. 324 pulled up ahead. Five of the crew strolled, laughing and with great good humor, to have their sandwiches on the beach and the driver himself stepped down from the cab, bearing a No. Nine iron, and proceeded to loft some sweet-looking approach shots on the grassy oval there. I mean, it could only happen in dear old Victoria.

So that's how I came to meet Doug Hudlin, Victoria-born, aged 48, an 18-handicapper at Cedar Hill though, frankly, I'd refuse to play him on those terms, descendant of Missouri slaves, and one of the handsomest men in our town. To several thousand Victorian youngsters he's best known as a baseball umpire — been 20 years president of the Victoria Umpires' Association and a long-time consultant for the Little League — and a man who will, on occasion, summarily evict an obstreperous, overly-partisan parent from the stands.

Doug's great-grandfather fled from slavery in Missouri to farm in Saanich, but the Hudlin side of the family settled in Victoria purely by chance. It was here, at Willows race track, that Doug's father, an itinerant jockey on the North American circuit, faced up to a weight problem, liked the town, settled down. One reason, Doug now thinks, is that Victoria, then and now, has been refreshingly free of overt discrimination.

How to explain the international figure of The Jolly Garbageman? Doug thinks there are many answers.

"There must be a whole library shelf of books with garbagemen jokes of the past," he reflected, "but today the work isn't considered comical or beneath a man's dignity. Just the opposite, in fact. You're doing an absolutely essential service, one of the few jobs that cause people to be glad to see you when you pull up at their door. Some of that feeling rubs off on a man, I guess. You're not selling or buying. You're just doing something that has to be done.

"The work isn't nearly as tough as it was when I went into it 18 years ago. The new kinds of collecting equipment have helped, but mainly it's because the conversion to oil means that there aren't the heavy cans of ashes that used to be murder on a man's back. Still, we work mighty hard, cover about 450 houses a day, and, like baseball, it's entirely a team effort. Maybe that helps to explain the good spirits. Men who work as a team, relying on the next man to carry his share, always seem to get along well.

"Our particular six-man crew on 324 has been together now for something like seven years. Besides myself there's Willie, John, Art, Nick and Kaar. We're a sort of little United Nations with our backgrounds in the southern States, England, Poland, Germany, Norway and the Ukraine. You couldn't want a more relaxed, friendly group of men.

"Oh, sure, there are some things that bug you. Robert Frost said you could tell a man by the fences he makes and we can tell a woman by the garbage she leaves. Ah, but you take the good with the bad, eh? That's life."

Ever the non-contormist, I dropped in to the Elite barber shop on Fort Street for a trim and darned if the man behind the chair wasn't my old friend Ted Ashlee, a long, lean bloke who used to cut my hair when it was all there and before the eternal snow had fallen. Long before your time, Shnooky.

The barber business these days isn't terrible, as I would have guessed. It's disastrous. Ted hasn't seen a client under the age of 35 for so long that he's come to think of himself as a specialist in tonsorial geriatrics.

Why, then, did he look so remarkably content and at peace with the world? The answer is that, at the age of 57, Ted is on the brink of a whole new career that has nothing whatever to do with hair.

It began six years ago when he moved from Duncan to Vancouver, found the big town a hateful, bogine place and enrolled in a course of creative writing "just for something to do." The best advice he got in the course — the best advice any would-be writer ever gets — was to write about what he knew. In Ted's case that went back to an early career as a merchant seaman and deep-sea fisherman.

Against all the incredible odds, his first short story was accepted by Canadian Boy, the Scouts' magazine. That, in turn, led to several more that attracted the interest of Holt, Rinehart and Winston, the publishers, who commissioned him to write the texts for some illustrated children's books.

In his spare time, over 14 months, Ted put together his first novel for young readers. It's called "Voyage Into Danger," a cracking good adventure story set in the Queen Charlottes, published in Canada and Britain and now at your favorite book shop. He now has another in the works. If the royalties are as green as they promise to be, Ted won't mind if you wear your hair down to your knees, Shnooky.

We met Eric and Jean Micheisen because, you see, we have this VIP editor friend who sneaks off occasionally to the golf course.

His system is diabolically clever. Spreads his most important papers on his desk, places his reading glasses and pen on top of them and leaves his desk lamp burning. The net effect is that of a man who has just stepped around the corner for a moment, perhaps to an important executive conference or the men's room. It hasn't fooled anyone, of course, but eases his conscience.

Naturally, he favors the more obscure golf courses where he's unlikely to run into his seniors — whose desk lamps are also burning — and this is how we came to play Broome Hill, the mine-hole course at Sooke and truly a delight.

Eric, who is 51, was a logger until, a dozen years ago in a summer of strikes and fires in the forest, he began to wonder if there wasn't a more reliable vocation. An informal survey of Sooke indicated that there were exactly seven golfers in the vicinity. Undaunted, as the saying goes, he and Jean bought the old 96-acre Comeau farm, spent a year-and-a-half converting its hilly pastures into nine challenging and scenic holes and began the construction of a club house. It was an act of faith that's paid off handsomely.

Like Gregarah, on Prospect Lake, another of my favorites, Broome Hill seems to have been laid out by an architect who hated the human race, but the pain of double-bogeys is eased by gorgeous views of the Olympics and the Sooke range. It plays to a par 61 and the course record, shared by several, is 59.

There are now more than 200 members, apart from the considerable numbers of Victorians who make regular pilgrimages, and the green fees are just $2 on week days, $3 on weekends. Which is nice, too.

Farmers For A Day

Melanie Douglas (left) of San Diego and Marianne Girard of Montreal are introduced to the local version of strawberry fields at Cool-Aid's three-acre farm in Saanich. Cool-Aid hires young travellers on a daily basis to help run the farm. About 190 young people have worked on the farm so far for $8 a day. In centre is farm organizer Rick Stamford. Blood Pours In

Eighteen donors gave blood in the first half-hour of today's clinic at the University of Victoria, indicating a three-day drive by the Red Cross to build critically low supplies will finish as strong as it started.

Donors totalled 247 Tuesday, down from 276 Monday but well over the minimum objective the local Red Cross traditionally sets of 150 a day.

Doctors at Royal Jubilee and St. Joseph's Hospitals said last week that blood was in such short supply some surgery was in danger of being cancelled. The hospitals recently received only half their requested allotments from the Red Cross central supply in Vancouver.

An international difference in donor practices prevented Tuesday's total passing the total of donors on Monday.

Two busloads, about 80 Japanese sailors from the defence ships Katori and Yamagumo in port, turned up at Red Cross House in the afternoon to give blood. They had to depart without doing so.

The reason, detailed in part through an interpreter:

The Japanese sailors give blood regularly, apparently once a month, but only 200 ccs a time.

Canadian donors give about 480 ccs and the amount of preservative in the plastic containers for donations is based on that size. The containers are antiseptically sealed and there was no way to adjust the amount of preservative.

Charles MacNeill, supervisor of the local Red Cross blood panel, said today he and his staff were "most appreciative" of the Japanese effort and "we were all very disappointed; it was just unfortunate circumstances."

13 PER CENT FIGURE MISLEADING

Doctors Richer? Well Maybe

By BRUCE YEMEN

In spite of an almost 13 per cent increase in gross medicare payments to B.C. doctors, there is no solid proof that most doctors made substantially more money last year than in the previous year.

Published for the third time since B.C. joined natonal medicare in 1968, figures showing medicare payments to doctors fail to give more than a general guide to their financial fortunes.

•

The figures are published by the Medical Services Commission which administers the over-all medical care plan in B.C. The parliamentary library and the public library will have a copy of the list of payments.

While payments to doctors for services under the medicare plan increased by almost 13 per cent to $128 million, there may have been as many as five per cent more doctors receiving payments.

In addition, the doctors received a fee increase of about 3.5 per cent at the end of 1969, which means the fiscal year comparisons for 1970-71 and 1969-70 are not on the same fee base.

For nine months of the 1969-70 fiscal year, doctors were working for a lower fee, which means it isn't fair to suggest they made 13 or even eight per cent more money this past year by churning more patients through their offices.

A further complication is that doctors' expenses increased as a result of salary increases granted to nurses. The rising cost of equipment and other supplies also ate into increased income.

But a glance through the list of payments shows that wide disparities continue to exist in the payments earned within different branches of medical practice.

A Victoria family doctor, for instance, shows payments of about $55,000 for each of the two years. Another holds steady around $35,000. But another who pulled in $19,000 two years ago is now up to $35,000. But it turns out he is a young doctor who is building up a practice.

A Victoria eye specialist who received $95,000 in payments in 1969-70 is down to $83,000 in the latest list, possibly because of provincial government cutbacks in allowable eye examinations from once a year to once every two years.

But another eye specialist, equally well established in practice, held steady at $65,000 for each of the years.

A radiologist with $130,000 in payments in 1969-70 received $167,000 in the latest year.

Publication of the figures was made mandatory by the provincial cabinet about two years ago. The move brought the medicare plan into line with other public agencies which also must publish lists of payments of more than $500 to individuals and companies.

Spokesmen for the Medical Services Commission have said in the past that they have adequate control over individual doctors abusing the plan, because they keep a "statistical profile" on each doctor.

•

The fact that the medicare list is the only one of its kind — except the provincial government's own Public Accounts — which is voluntarily given to the press has strengthened the belief that the government is using publicity to hold down doctors' wage demands as a group rather than to expose individial abuses.

The government has made no move to provide the kind of supporting information necessary to evaluate individual doctor's payments, such as how hard each doctor works.

The government's success in convincing doctors to defer any increases in their fees for this year appears to have helped provide a whopping 40 per cent increase in federal contributions to the medicare plan in the past year — $51 million instead of $36 million.

No Change to Public—Mayors

Two Greater Victoria mayors said today there will be no basic change in service to the public under the proposed amalgamated social services agency under the Capital Regional District.

Esquimalt Mayor Art Young said no one questions the work of Family and Children's Service.

The F and CS had agreed it should be a regional function, but not under the CRD but another elected board, he said. (See also Page 40.)

In the future, many other things — library, fire, police — could be regionalized.

"If we follow your thinking we must elect a new board for each function," he said.

★ ★ ★

He made the comments during a meeting this morning of the regional district's social services committee and F and CS officials.

Oak Bay Mayor Frances Elford said regional board directors, although they deal with sewers and parks, are concerned with human beings "otherwise they would not run for public office. As I understand it, none of the good works by F and CS would be thrown away. None of the ability to initiate new programs need be lost. There's no necessity for anyone in F and CS to feel loss of seniority and position."

John Gordon, an F and CS director, said, "We have accepted the principle of regionalization. I was not aware until this morning that the plan outlines is flexible."

Mayor Back At the End Of Summer?

Mayor Courtney Haddock will be out of hospital in two weeks and able to resume "some" city hall duties by the end of the summer, his doctor said Tuesday.

Dr. Lumir L. Ptak said the mayor's condition continues to improve. He now is listed in satisfactory condition and resting comfortably in the intensive care unit at Royal Jubilee Hospital.

The doctor also cleared up confusion about the nature of Haddock's illness, variously reported by sources — including the mayor himself — as angina and heart attack.

Haddock, 65, did in fact suffer an angina attack, a painful contraction of blood vessels in the heart area.

This was followed by a coronary occlusion with myocardial infarction — "in layman's terms, a heart attack," Ptak said.

"In any event, the mayor's trouble went beyond angina."

After Haddock was felled last Tuesday, a terse announcement from acting mayor Tom Christie said the mayor suffered a heart attack.

Then, Monday night, Haddock left his hospital bed to telephone a radio hot line program. While he was "under medication," Ptak said, the mayor described his condition as angina only and said he would be back in harness at city hall soon.

Not so, said Ptak.

ABOUT THIS TIME LAST week a back-of-the-nose-tickle signalled an unwelcome message. Summer cold coming on, and as everyone knows, that kind is the hardest to shake.

For one thing, a summer cold rarely comes out and fights. It pesters and niggles. Its manifestations are a stuffy head, a sore throat, wandering aches and pains, and a general no-good feeling.

I lugged along until the weekend, when a choice presented itself. Give in to the sneaky virus and be miserable in bed, or head miserably up-Island as we'd planned.

What tipped the balance was a new fly-rod that needed testing — a labor of love that demands lively water, breeze, green outdoors and a more or less vertical stance.

"Anyway," Ron said, "I'll do the driving. You and your germs can take it easy on the back seat."

So Ron and Win loaded up while I straw-bossed the job as a privileged character. Then we angled through Saanich to a great north road burdened with the peak traffic of tourist season.

It grew on me that a summer cold does convey certain advantages.

A driver's freedom to look around is limited. He can never let his attention stray far from the road, whereas a back-seater can rubberneck at will. Then, when he has viewed his fill of cows in fields, mountains still snow-tipped and recreation vehicles of all styles and sizes, he can put his feet up and settle down for a nap. Sleep, after all, is the best healer.

Having delivered that unctuous pronouncement to the front-seaters, I slept clear up to Cougar Creek, a shaded waterbrook whose name enchants pilgrims from the smog-belt. One of its name-signs had been pinched — perhaps to deck the wall of some city rumpus room.

At Shelter Bay we found Californians Gladys and Bert, who had trailered their 23-footer north behind their camper for a fishing holiday.

"Summer cold, eh?" Bert observed. He offered a bottle of curative stout, and suggested that a touch of salt air and a workout with a salmon might also be good medicine.

He was right. The cold began to retreat about the time an obliging six-pound coho hit in the good hole above Willow Point that evening. But I was still able to manage a pathetic cough or two next morning.

"What he needs," Ron prescribed at breakfast, "is good, hot sunshine to bake it out of him. I know a place that should be about right."

He drove us inland, first over blacktop then gravel, and finally on narrow red-earth roads that had once carried logging railway steel. That country has healed itself in the years since the loggers reaped, slash-burned and passed. It is clothed in young evergreen, with alder in the bottom-lands and blue lakes to temper its windless heat.

We came to a lake. A creek drained from it, chuckling through minor rapids or loafing deep and quiet as a meadow stream between brushy banks. Here was a perfect place for a man recovering from a summer cold to try a new fly-rod.

Ron warned me not to fall in, then vanished into the brush.

Win and I rigged up, crossed the creek by a set of decaying logs and found water to our liking.

The sun beat down. The stream flowed lazily. Across where water-lily pads edged a miniature cove, a fat little cutthroat trout flirted its tail at drifting insect. I tied a simulated wool-and-bucktail insect to my leader tip, and forgot to cough.

The new fly-rod couldn't have worked better. And though the saucy trout of the creek weren't large, this was idyllic fishing.

I enjoyed it until Ron and Win insisted that it would be better for my summer cold if we went back to the car.

The thing about a cold, summer or winter, is that it's going to run its course, as mine seems to have done. Naturally, I'm glad it's gone. But while it lasted, no guy with the miseries could have been more pampered!

CHOU SEEKS RETREAT BEFORE TALKS

China Demands U.S. Pullout

FIRST BABY to be born in British Columbia on Centennial Day is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Lorne Cunningham, 26 Helmcken, posing with his mother at the Royal Jubilee Hospital. The seven pound seven ounce boy was born eight minutes after midnight Tuesday and is one of at least 11 babies whose parents will receive 100 silver dollars to mark their child's birth within 71 minutes of the province's 100th birthday. Also born at RJH, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Roy, 171 Bushby, barely made the 71-minute deadline, arriving on the dot of 1 a.m.

Quit Asia, Nixon Told

By JOHN BURNS
Special to The Times

PEKING — Premier Chou En-Lai has made it emphatically clear that China's interest in normalization of relations with the United States will not be pursued at the cost of China's allies in Indochina.

In a three and a half hour encounter with a group of American students this week, the premier declared that a complete withdrawal of U.S. forces from Indochina must take priority over the search for improved Sino-American relations.

'Greatest Cry' for Withdrawal

Speaking in the general context of his invitation to President Richard Nixon to visit Peking, Premier Chou said the "greatest cry" of public opinion, both in the U.S. and elsewhere, is for the U.S. administration to withdraw its forces from Indochina.

"It might also be said that this demand is even stronger than the demand to restore the relations between the Chinese and American peoples, because the people of the United States do not want to sacrifice the lives of the American people in this dirty war. Isn't this so?" the premier said.

"Therefore we believe the question to be solved first should be the question of Indochina and by doing so we will be satisfying not only the interests of the Indochinese people but also the people of the United States," he added.

All of Indochina Included

In his remarks on the war, Mr. Chou made it clear that the demand for U.S. withdrawal went beyond Vietnam to "all of Indochina" — Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia. Moreover it covered "not only troops, but all military forces and all military installations."

In so defining the demand the premier appeared to go beyond the seven-point peace proposal made at the Paris peace conference on July 1 by negotiators for the National Liberation Front. A key aspect of the NLF proposals was that they specified a U.S. withdrawal only from Vietnam.

However, Mr. Chou made it clear that China stands by the support it has voiced through its official press for the NLF proposals. The proposals were "the only way to solve the problem" and enjoyed "our complete support," he said.

One of Four Obstacles

Earlier Chou cited the war in Indochina as one of four "obstacles" standing in the way of a normalization of Sino-American relations. He gave the others as the United States commitment to Taiwan, the situation in Korea and the revival of Japanese militarism.

The premier's remarks were conveyed to correspondents in Peking by spokesmen for the friendship delegation of the committee of concerned Asia scholars, a 15-member group which has been touring China for nearly four weeks. Before meeting with the correspondents the group checked their notes against a taped transcript of their conversation with Mr. Chou. In addition they won clearance from the Chinese foreign ministry for the wide circulation of his remarks.

Outspoken Opposition Policy

The scholars' group was founded three years ago and claims a membership of about 5,000, most on campuses in the United States. It has a policy of outspoken opposition to U.S. military involvement in Indochina. It also opposes the U.S. policy on Taiwan.

The delegation's meeting with Chou took place in the Great Hall of the People, in the same room in which Chou greeted members of the U.S. ping pong team during their landmark visit to China three months ago.

Apart from journalists, the scholars are the first large group of Americans to visit China since the ping pong team.

The premier said: "The governments of the two countries should bear the main responsibility for the normalizing of relations between the two countries and the restoration of their relations.

"Now, in the present day, in contracting your government to normalize relations we must contact those who are in authority in your country at present.

Taiwan Support May End

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. Senate Foreign Relations Committee voted today to repeal a resolution of congressional backing for use of U.S. forces to protect Taiwan.

The so-called Formosa Resolution was approved by Congress Jan. 29, 1955, at a time of Red Chinese pressure on the nationalist-held islands off the Chinese mainland, including Taiwan (also known as Formosa) and the Pescadores.

Chiang Kai-shek set up a Nationalist Chinese government on Taiwan after the Communists won the mainland.

Repeal of the resolution was proposed by Sens. Frank Church (D—Idaho) and Charles McC. Mathias (R—Md.).

NEUTRAL STAND

The state department took a neutral position on the question of repeal of the resolution which gave no grant of actual power to the president but served to back his hand in dealing with a crisis.

The repeal was introduced more than a year ago at the same time as the start of an effort which culminated in repeal of the Gulf of Tonkin Resolution on Vietnam.

The committee chairman, Sen. J. William Fulbright (D—Ark.), told reporters the committee action today was not directly related to President Nixon's planned visit to Peking, but conceded that the timing was not altogether a coincidence, either.

MONTREAL (CP) — The target of the second 24-hour strike against Air Canada by its mechanics and ground personnel is Montreal International Airport.

A spokesman for the International Association of Machinists made the announcement just two hours before the scheduled 4 p.m. starting time for the walkout.

Air Canada said it planned to operate all flights in and out of the city as usual.

"We feel we can do it this time," a spokesman said.

Tourists Jam Ferries

Ideal weather and the height of the tourist season are combining to produce traffic jams at B.C. Ferries terminals, particularly on the mainland side.

The company reported today delays of more than an hour at Tsawwassen, with many cars having to wait for a second ship.

At Swartz Bay, the terminal agent says "hardly any" cars are being left behind to wait for the next ferry.

Five ships are in operation on the run, with departures every hour on the hour from both sides, from 7 a.m. to 10 p.m.

B.C. Ferries operates more than 20 ferries around the island and to the mainland.

Tank 'Shoots Through the Air'

KAMLOOPS, B.C. (CP) — A burning propane tank car shot through the air like a skyrocket early today when a dynamite charge was used in an effort to ease gas pressure at the scene of a massive CNR derailment 16 miles northeast of here.

A CNR official at the scene said that apparently too much dynamite was used in the operation.

The plan was to blow a four-inch hole in the end of the tanker to ease pressure and reduce the chances of an explosion—allowing work crews to build bypass tracks around the wreck which has blocked the CNR mainline near Vinsulla, B.C., since Monday.

But the charge blew a fourfoot hole in the car and it went shooting through the air for 300 feet, struck the ground and bounced a further 1,200 feet.

The tanker shot over four big bulldozers parked at the scene without touching them.

There were no injuries. Workers had been cleared from the area for the blast.

Following the fireworks, the last remaining fires at the scene were extinguished.

More than 100 men worked this morning to build the bypass. Estimates of when the mainline would be opened for traffic ranged from 4 p.m. today to 9 a.m. Thursday.

The cause of Monday's derailment still was not known. A CNR spokesman said "the answer might be under that pile of boxcars," but added that once regular traffic resumes it may be several weeks before crews can remove the remains of about 50 cars destroyed in the crash.

COST UNKNOWN

Another railway official said the cost of the damage had not been estimated in detail, but likely would be more than $2 million.

Meantime, experts were trying to determine the extent of damage to area farms resulting from spilled sulphur and thick sulphur fumes that belched from the wreck for more than a day.

Residents of the communities of Vinsulla and Raleigh, north of Kamloops, reported the sulphur fumes were ruining gardens and alfalfa crops.

Dr. Hugh M. Richards, medical health officer for the south central region, warned them not to eat fresh fruit or vegetables showing signs of deterioration.

Sixty-five cars of a 94-car westbound freight were derailed on a flat stretch of farmland 16 miles northeast of Kamloops Monday. Two propane cars exploded, sending freight cars flying and spreading sulphur, lumber and other cargo into the fields.

Another two propane tankers blew up later and flames and heavy sulphur smoke belched from the wreckage through the night.

No one was injured.

The propane car was the last big obstacle in the way of crews trying to put down temporary track around the scorched wreckage. Three others survived, soot-blackened, and were hauled to safety Tuesday night.

The bypass, known as a shoofly, should be completed today. It will allow the railway to handle a backlog of 30 freight trains jamming sidings and marshalling yards in British Columbia and Alberta.

CNR freight was partially rerouted along CP Rail lines through Calgary Tuesday and along Pacific Great Eastern tracks to northern B.C. About 2,400 passengers were flown

HEROIN TRAFFIC JOINS TOP TEN

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Province says heroin trafficking rates as one of British Columbia's top 10 industries with annual sales estimated at $160 million.

The newspaper said street sales of the addictive drug represent five per cent of the province's entire retail sales output of $3.1 billion.

Estimates were made in consultation with police and the provincial Narcotic Addiction Foundation, based on an estimate of 10,000 heroin addicts made public last week by the B.C. Medical Association.

Of the 10,000 addicts, about 2,000 are known to be "older generation" addicts, using between five and eight capsules of heroin a day. Using the five-cap figure, these addicts consume about 10,000 caps a day.

The remaining "younger generation" addicts use between two and three caps a day each. Using the two-cap figure new addicts probably need a total 16,000 caps a day.

COST $15 A CAP

The average street price for one cap in Vancouver is $15.

This means that the 26,000 caps of heroin—about 2½ pounds needed every day in B.C.—is worth about $440,000 retail daily or $160.6 million annually.

Most of the heroin used in B.C. is called European white and comes mostly from the south of France, where opium grown in Turkey is made into morphine base and then heroin.

A kilogram of heroin is worth up to $750 at source, between $25,000 and $50,000 after being processed in Europe and between five and 10 times that much when it reaches the market in B.C.

There are 35.2 ounces in a kilogram and 400 to 600 capsules to an ounce, depending on dilution.

Convict Committees To Ease Tensions

OTTAWA (CP) — Wardens of 32 federal prisons have been directed to allow prisoners to elect committees "to improve co-operation with management."

The committees of prisoners, elected by secret ballot, will have neither decision-making authority nor administrative power, but are expected to bring about change within the institutions, said the announcement Tuesday by Solicitor-General Jean-Pierre Goyer.

Their primary purpose will be to "open up better communications between staff and inmates."

They will also make suggestions on treatment and training programs, acting as an escape valve for the tensions that build up in penitentiaries.

Spokesmen here say a raft of directives is going out from Penitentiaries Commissioner Paul Faguy aimed at "humanizing the whole system." They involve everything from rules on correspondence to visiting privileges.

FRUSTRATIONS

"These are the things they complain about," an official says of the 7,000 federal prisoners, whose frustrations have been vented in several institutions in recent months.

The most notable disturbance occurred in April at Kingston penitentiary, where guards were held hostage while a committee of prisoners carried grievances outside.

One factor said to have led to the Kingston riot was fear among prisoners of the kind of life they would lead when transferred to Millhaven, a new maximum security prison 18 miles away. Rumors of round-the-clock surveillance of electronic eyes, which don't exist at Millhaven, were mentioned.

Prison disturbances traditionally have been associated with the "little" things, such as an unvaried menu, unexplained changes in routine.

"We recognize that committees of prisoners elected by the inmate population can provide a vital communications link between the inmate body and the prison population," Goyer said in a news release.

TWICE A YEAR

Under Faguy's directive, effective Aug. 1, the committees would work with the administration on treatment and training programs, recreation, privileges, and community service projects.

They would be elected twice a year, since the turnover in prison population is high because of releases and admissions. Meetings would be once a month, with recommendations and suggestions being forwarded to the wardens.

The inmate representative would be responsible for informing the group he represents — a cell block, for instance — of proceedings. And minutes would be tacked on notice boards.

Recently the penitentiaries service announced that leisure clothes will be provided for prisoners and work clothes will be of better material, with the numbers on the inside rather than the outside.

NO CENSORSHIP

After the matter was raised in Parliament, Goyer ordered that letters to himself or members of Parliament from prisoners no longer be censored by prison officials.

Both Goyer, who became solicitor-general last December, and Faguy, penitentiaries commissioner since last September, have been pushing the program to "humanize" the prisons, where some rules predate Confederation and a stifling military atmosphere can still be found.

Riel Sketch By Mayor Angers Metis

SASKATOON (CP) — The Metis Society of Saskatchewan has asked Saskatoon Mayor Sid Buckwold for a public apology for his take-off of Metis leader Louis Riel Friday night.

"It is a good example of white philosophy," Bruce Flamont, administrator for the society, said Tuesday. ". . . Whitey goes around figuring he is the greatest and anyone else is to be used for fun and profit."

At a civic reception Friday, Buckwold emerged from a coffin with a noose around his neck and recited a poem, the gist of which was that Riel would have died happier if he had been hanged in Saskatoon instead of Regina. The reception was for representatives of Regina's summer exhibition.

Flamont said the skit was an answer "to these people who ask what racism or white supremist ignorance is."

The society has tried hard to build up native people's history and expose lies built up during the past 100 years, he said.

"Louis Riel is a major fact of our history, both Indian and Metis. He was brutally murdered for the simple reason his people wanted freedom from oppression and greed."

Riel was hanged in 1885 for leading Metis and Indians in a rebellion over land rights.

Buckwold was not available for comment.

GUERRILLA CRACKDOWN COMPLETE

Fellow Arabs Outraged by Hussein

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The Arab chorus of outrage at Jordan's suppression of the Palestinian Arab guerrillas mounted today, but King Hussein appeared to have eliminated, for the time being at least, the commandos' threat to his throne.

Egypt endorsed Libya's call for an Arab summit meeting to support the guerrillas, announcing that President Anwar Sadat was sending a personal envoy to Damascus with the foreign minister of Saudi Arabia to confer with Syrian President Hafez Assad.

Syria charged the Jordanians with shelling Syrian border posts. Radio Damascus said Syria would "take whatever measures are needed to support the Palestinian commando movement."

Iraq, which closed its border with Jordan early this week and ordered its ambassador home from Ammas, asked Hussein to withdraw his ambassador from Baghdad.

Kuwait and Lebanon welcomed Libya's all for an arab summit, as did guerrilla chieftain Yasser Arafat, directing what appeared to be his forces' last stand in Jordan from the Syrian border town of Deraa. The guerrilla radio in Baghdad said much more than a summit conference was needed.

Saudi Arabia was an exception to the angry outcries. Amman Radio said the oil kingdom had paid the Jordanian government $9.6 million Tuesday as part of the annual subsidy king Faisal has made to Jordan since the 1967 Middle East war.

Hussein's government reacted to the mounting criticism by declaring that two agreements regulating relations between the Jordanian army and the guerrillas were still valid. Jordan had renounced them two days earlier.

The agreements, reached after the army's first crackdown on the commandos last September, set forth terms of oexistence so that the guerrillas could continue to operate against Israel from bases in Jordan.
